TUCKER IS DEFIANT OF LAW

Boy Threatens to Run Away With Great-Aunt If Marriage Is Annulled

New York, Dec. 5.—"Will you put this down and make it plain; my wife is not fifty years old, she's thirty-five."

Burton S. Tucker, adolescent husband of Mrs. Susan O. Simpson Tucker, his own great-aunt, nailed that base slander aimed at his adored bride with great gravity.

He had been delegated by the gayly attired matron to do the talking. She smiled pleased approbation at him from the end of the table.

With John Schulenga, seventeen, chum of the young bridegroom and nominally Mrs. Simpson Tucker's chauffeur, the pair were dining in the Ridgfield, N. J., bungalow which they have chosen for a honeymoon retreat.

BRIDE SUDDENLY SHY.

The gave Mr. Tucker was talking to newspaper writers.

When the bride and bridegroom greeted the press representatives, Mrs. Tucker hastily remarked:

"He's the talker now—don't quote me."

Mrs. Tucker had been quoted at some length on the preceding day on the subject of her greatest love and her husband's first real love and analogous emotions, illustrated with amores poses before newspaper cameras, and her sudden shyness may have been the result of a perusal of the morning papers.

"I never talk," she added. And she smiled toward "Bud," as she calls her immature spouse, tenderly, him the floor.

His chest expansion intimated the determination not to fail his wife. He opened his mouth, but his first words were unfortunate, perhaps, because Mrs. Susan Simpson Tucker hastily summoned him to the kitchen for a whispering consultation.

They returned anon, and Mrs.

"DIXIE" CLEMENT

Providence sub deb, whose elopement has left score of Brown students on "Mourning Bench."

COLLEGE ELOPERS HUNTED BY RADIO

Providence, R. I., Dec. 5.—"Dixie's" home was thronged with young "mourners."

Fifteen were there, all from Brown University dormitories and Brown "frat" houses.

Sad-faced young men, admirers of "Dixie," they came to console "Pa" and "Ma" in their hour of trouble.

"Dixie" Clement, just seventeen, Hope High School senior, all-round athlete, talented musician and regarded as Providence's most popular "sub-deb," had eloped with John F. Wentworth, a Brown and Thayer Academy athlete.

Behind her she left a string of admiring young men, and fifteen of them, Brown students, came to the home where the "welcome sign" was

BOY, LEFT ALONE AT HOME, DYING AS RESULT OF BURNS

Fitchburg, Dec. 5.—Freddie Albert, seven years old, is dying of burns in Burbank Hospital because his father and mother have to leave for their work before Freddie gets out of bed. The father, Alexander J. Albert is a machinist and Mrs. Albert is employed in a cloth mill.

They went to work as usual today and Freddie got up to build a fire in the kitchen stove. It did not burn briskly and he poured some gasolene on it. A burst of flame enveloped him, burning the clothing from his body and the hair from his head. Surgeons hold out no hope for his recovery.

U. S. RECOGNITION PACTS SIDETRACTED BY MEXICO

Mexico City, Dec. 5.—The two claims conventions drawn up at the recognition conference last Summer will not be ratified at the present session of the Mexican Senate, it was officially stated today, inasmuch as President Obregon has not sent them to the upper house.

Unless the executive convokes a special session there is no possibility that the agreements with the United States will be ratified during President Obregon's term, as the Senate adjourns on December 31 and will not reassemble until next September.

DR. ROBB IS READY TO CONFESS

Accused Physician Will Plead Guilty to Charge of Illegal Surgery

Dr. William M. Robb of the Back Bay, who has been in the East Cambridge jail charged with murder in connection with the Tyngsboro suitcase mystery, will be tried for illegal surgery and will confess his guilt.

He will be indicted on the lesser charge by the Middlesex county grand jury, and immediate trial and passage of sentence are expected.

SWOPE ALSO TO BE TRIED.

Dr. Alva H. Swope of Brockton, once charged with being an accessory to the murder, will be tried on the charge of being an accessory to the illegal operation.

Dr. W. M. Robb

Last fall, a suitcase was recovered from the Merrimac river near the Tyngsboro bridge, containing parts of a dismembered body. Later other parts of the body were recovered. The head and abdomen were not found. The dismembered body was identified as that of Mrs. Alice Wolschendorf of East Bridgewater.

The indictment of Dr. Robb on the charge of committing the murder and of Dr. Swope on a charge of being an accessory before and after the fact followed soon afterward.

Dr. Robb will admit that he operated on Mrs. Wolschendorf and that she died while under ether, probably from heart failure. He will admit he dismembered the body and disposed of it.

HEAD THROWN IN RIVER.

The head of the body was thrown into the Merrimac river in a small hand bag at the same time the limbs and torso were disposed of, and is in the river at the present time.

It is alleged that Dr. Swope is the physician to whom Mrs. Wolschendorf first applied for treatment, and that he indicated to the woman that

2 BOYS HELD AS ROBBERS OF COP

Charged With Holding Up a Cambridge Patrolman at Point of Gun

Vincent O'Brien, sixteen years old, of No. 33½ Essex street, and Joseph Glynn, seventeen, of 42 Tremont street, Cambridge, were arrested today charged with holding up Patrolman Peter Lyons of the Cambridge police and robbing him of $125.

The robbery occurred last Saturday night, according to the police.

Lyons, driver of the patrol wagon of Station 3, was with a young woman in his automobile on Carlton street when an auto containing four young men drove alongside and, at the point of a pistol, forced the patrolman to give up his money.

The police say Glynn has confessed his part in the holdup, but O'Brien declared that he was present in the car but took no part in the robbery. Two other Cambridge youths are being sought today.

Besides the police say, is the youth who was with Joseph Burke of Tremont street, Cambridge, last August, when Burke accidentally killed himself with a 32-calibre pistol. Some time later Glynn was arrested, charged with carrying a gun.

The police say the gun he was carrying was the one Burke used. Glynn was sent to Shirley, but escaped after serving two months.

JAPS AROUSED BY U. S. EDICT

Tokio, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Aroused by the return from the United States of large numbers of Japanese immigrants, various public organizations and vernacular newspapers of the empire are urging the Foreign Office to take some action that will offset the effect of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, barring Japanese from American citizenship and sustaining anti-alien land laws of California and Washington.

Thus far, beyond preparing instructions for the guidance of Ambassador Hanihara at Washington, the contents of which have not been disclosed, the government has taken no action. Proposals for the abolition of dual Japanese and American nationality and for enforcement of the anti-alien land act, passed by the Diet ten years ago, but never enforced, have been under consideration for a year, however.

Cherbourg, France—Sailing for New York on the Majestic today are J. J. Morgan, Edward R. Stettinius, Willis H. Booth and former American Ambassador Hugh C. Wallace with Mrs. Wallace and their son.

DEMAND 'PADLOCK' ON DRUG STORE RUM

For the first time in Massachusetts the State courts have been appealed to for a "padlock injunction" to enforce the Federal dry laws. A bill of equity has been brought in the Norfolk County Superior Civil Court at Dedham by District Attorney Harold P. Williams asking the court for an injunction to restrain John L. McGown, a druggist at No. 1621 Beacon street, Brookline, and the owner of the building in which the drug store is situated, from selling liquor on the premises.

The action was brought as the first step in the enforcement of the Volstead act. McGown was charged with maintaining a liquor nuisance and keeping and exposing liquor for sale. The clerk was charged with selling liquor in four counts.

These cases were not heard today, but continued until Friday, by which time the Superior Court will have disposed of the petition for an injunction.

2 BOYS ARRESTED FOR 50 BURGLARIES

Two sixteen-year-old boys, arrested in Eaton square, Dorchester, today, have, the police charge, committed fifty or more burglaries in Dorchester, Mattapan, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and elsewhere in the city. The boys confessed to five burglaries in Dorchester. The boys are John F. Connors of Carle street, Roxbury, and Joseph Simmons of Washington street, Jamaica Plain. They were counting money in Eaton square when Special Officers O'Connell and Leary of the Fields Corner station found them. The boys fled through back yards, over fences, up alleyways. Connors escaped, but Simmons was arrested. Connors was found later.

The boys were dividing the loot obtained at No. 14 Fifield street, consisting of $8 in money, a $125 diamond ring and a $50 ring. They confessed to taking $150 in money, a diamond ring and two watches from No. 56 Hancock street; $125 and two rings from No. 34 Sawyer street and sundry loot from other places. In several places they used a glass cutter to get at the window latches; in others they entered by cellar windows, and in one place used a false key.

ARREST NOTORIOUS FORGER AS HE STEPS FROM TRAIN

Harding A. R. Trembly, sometimes known as A. G. Colburn and John C. Bliss, a notorious forger, came to Boston today.

He had hardly stepped from the train when he was recognized by Inspector George Augusta of police headquarters, who arrested him on an indictment warrant for larceny of American Express Company travelers' checks at Schenectady, N. Y. Augusta recognized the man from various rogues' gallery portraits he had studied.

Trembly has had a spectacular career. He has served sentences in various parts of the country. He is highly educated, evidently a college man. He refused to discuss his youth or his family, however, and nothing is known of his early life.

Trembly will be held for the Schenectady police, who have been advised of his arrest.

CASH PAID TO SATISFY HUSBAND

Gave Up $50,000 When Mr. Fowler Demanded That Hotel Man Pay

Meyer Berman, who operated the famous old Higgins Oyster House, Court street, Boston, a few years back, was not the victim of blackmail or a shakedown when he paid $50,000 to Daniel H. Coakley.

The money was paid to satisfy the irate husband of a lady who was indiscreet enough to be a guest at Berman's place with another man.

This was revealed by William J. "Big Bill" Corcoran. He acted as attorney for the husband. Daniel H. Coakley, disbarred attorney, sued by Berman for $50,000, acted in Berman's behalf.

Corcoran, alleged member of a blackmail ring, trial of which was suddenly halted a few weeks back, came into the case as a surprise witness today.

Strangely enough he was drawn in by counsel for Berman.

The big courtroom where the case is being heard by Judge Walcott somewhat resembled a junior edition of the recent Blackmail Trial in that "Big Bill's" counsel, Joseph F. Walsh was present, also half a dozen other attorneys who battled for members of the alleged ring at the recent hearing.

The surprise of Corcoran's entire was followed by the "woman in the case" being named for the first time. "She was a Mrs. Fowler," said Corcoran.

Mrs. Walter F. Fowler, whose husband is a director of carnivals in Cambridge.

Corcoran then testified that her husband came to him while Corcoran was District Attorney for Middlesex County and asked him to proceed against Meyer Berman.

GIRL, 4, IS FATALLY INJURED LIFTING MATE FROM FLOOR

Worcester, Dec. 5.—While trying to lift her playmate, Dorothy Riordan, four, of Holden, stumbled and fell, dying three hours later. Associate Medical Examiner Ernst L. Hunt gave the cause of death as "thymic shock," due to over exertion.

Dorothy went to the home next door to play with her little chum. In trying to lift her, she caught her foot in the edge of the carpet and both fell. The playmate sprang to her feet and, after waiting for the other to rise, reached down to help her up.

as his hotel," said Fowler, "and they registered there. I had warned Berman not to receive my wife there or to serve her drinks."

DID IT FOR COAKLEY.

There followed the exiting of the hotel register, the visit of Berman to Coakley's office.

"There," said Corcoran, "I was persuaded by Coakley to settle for less than I asked on benalf of my client. I did it for Coakley only. He fought hard for Berman, his partner Isaac Gordon and James H. Doyle, who had an interest in the house."

Doyle was one time acting Mayor of Boston, also a member of the Board of Aldermen.

"Think of Jim Coakley said to me," testified Corcoran.

"So I cut down my figure from $35,000 to $25,000. Berman gave me a check for $2,500 and agreed to give me the balance in three days. He was to go out and borrow the money. He did and I was paid. Any charge that Coakley conspired is false."

FOR JIM DOYLE.

The introduction of Mrs. Fowler to the unamed man was in the Fall of 1916. It was early in October the same year that Berman paid over the big settlement. Later, he charges, he had to pay Coakley $15,000 more in another case.

Berman, Corcoran testified, made several offers to settle the Fowler case before he paid the sum demanded.

"He first offered $10,000, then $20,000, but I refused to listen. I would not have cut the figure at all if it hadn't been for Coakley's plea on behalf of Jims Doyle."

The case resumed this morning following Judge Wait's statement late Tuesday to Attorney William H. Garland, counsel for Berman, that he found failed to prove conspiracy on the part of Mr. Coakley.

The latter making use of citizens's rights is conducting his own case. He was disbarred following the famous blackmail airings.

Before Corcoran began his story Jacles Wait conferred with Attorney Garland and Coakley. Corcoran, examined by Atty. Garland stated he is living at No. 715 Parker street, Roxbury. Questioned regarding his acquaintanceship with Coakley he said he knew him intimately.

Q.—You considerd Mr. Coakley one of your friends? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you also acquainted with Assistant Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier? A.—I was.

Q.—In the Autumn of 1916 do you recall a request to go to the office of Mr. Coakley in relation to a matter of one Berman. A.—No. Not on request.

Q.—Do you remember going to Mr. Coakley's office A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see any men there? A.—I recognized the elder Berman. He was with whiskers there.

Q.—Did you see his son Louis there? A.—I never knew him.

Q.—Who else was there? A.—Mr. Gordon and James H. Doyle.

COOLIDGE SIGNS PARDON FOR CRAIG

Officials here assert the warrant wipes out the sentence by Judge Mayer, and that Craig is left no discretion as to accepting or refusing the clemency granted. The justice department holds authority to exercise him to prison will be entirely lacking.

PLAN AERIAL PULLMANS TO COMPETE WITH TRAINS

New York, Dec. 5.—Engineers are studying the problem of sleeping berths on airplanes, it was revealed in a report by Archibald Black and Donald R. Black, aeronautical engineers of Garden City, L. I., at the forty-fourth annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at No. 29 West Thirty-ninth street.

Railroads are on the verge of air competition that will seriously menace their extra-fare train traffic, the report declares, and this competition will appear between New York and Chicago when trests can be brought down by a headway of at least fifty airplanes daily each way, within fifteen to twenty years.

Mexico City, Dec. 5.—Federal forces are preparing to march upon Chilpancingo, capital of Guerrero State, where the rebels under General Romulo Figueroa are established. TESTIFY CRASH OF WARSHIPS UNAVOIDABLE

That the Battleship Arkansas could not have avoided the collision with the destroyer McFarland in Cape Cod Bay early on the morning of September 19, in which one man lost his life and a score of seamen were injured, after the latter ship was discovered converging on the course of the battleship, was given as the opinion of several officers of the Battleship Arkansas at the general courtmartial sitting at the Charlestown Navy Yard.

The opinion of the officers, however, varied on the distance that the McFarland was away from the battleship, when the officers of the battleship first sighted the destroyer.

One officer placed her 1,000 yards away, another officer, 500, and Lieut. Commander Phillip said in his judgment the destroyer was about fifty yards away.

Commander Harry L. Pence, commanding officer of the McFarland, is being tried by the general courtmartial on the charge of having hazarded a vessel of the United States Navy under his command.

Demands That Each Frenchman Have 3 Children

Paris, Dec. 5.—Senator Massabau, concerned at the deficient French birth rate, introduced a bill providing that no man can be elected to public office unless he has at least three children, his own or adopted. One effect would be to make such men as Premier Poincare, Armistide Briand, Rene Viviani and Louis Barthou ineligible for the public service even as selectmen in the smallest township.

Senator Labrousse moved that "we only pronounce on this bill when each of us shall have had time to have three children." A majority agreed and refused to give the measure immediate consideration.

STUDENT AND GIRL FLEE

always out and mirth and laughter had held sway.

As Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. Clement, the fascinating, "Dixie's" mother and father, received the long line of "mourners," the deep-voice broadcaster at WJAR, the Outlet Base Radio Station, sang out a description of the slopers. He laid stress on a big red sport model touring car in which the young couple were travelling.

"RED CAR DID IT."

"It was that d—— red car," said the irate father to the police, when he asked to help find the young couple.

"Dixie was crazy over that car. She thought the sun rose and set over it. It was the car as much as the man, I guess. Young Wentworth let her drive it a lot. He used to leave it in my garage and Dixie used to drive it around town. I understand now that he told her that he was going to get it to her when they got married. We have two cars of our own, both sedans and both steamers and they can go like the wind. But Dixie fell for the red, that's all."

Wentworth was a football star at Thayer Academy and was captain of the Brown freshman football eleven last year. Love of football proved his undoing, for his studies went by the board and Brown gave Wentworth his "ticket of leave."

Last Summer, Wentworth, who is twenty years old, met Miss Wendell Boyden, No. 95 Munroe road, Quincy, Mass., at Narragansett Pier. Since then Wentworth has been making his home in Quincy. He received a $50,000 fortune, the estate of his late father, from the executor, Byron V. Richards, secretary of the State Board of Health, and celebrated the receipt of his wealth by eloping with "Dixie."

Dr. Clement asked the police to arrest the couple, provided they were not legally married. "If they're married," he said, "we'll have to make the best of it.

"Young Wentworth has never been in business and he has no profession, so I don't know what he will do when his money gives out. But if they're married I'll help them all I can. The lad has a winning personality, that's one thing in his favor."

Richards, the uncle, thinks the slopers are en route to Florida. Wentworth told him recently, he said, that they planned to spend the Winter in the South. Radio broadcasting stations along the Atlantic seaboard are aiding the police in an effort to find the slopers by sending out descriptions of the couple.

The chances are that "Dixie" and "Jack" are married, for Dr. and Mrs. Clement received a telegram from them, reading:

"Jack and I are married; letter will follow."

HOME BREW, 15 P. C. DEADLY POISON

Do you silver your "innards?"

You do, if you drink your own "stuff."

You drink as high as 15 per cent. acetaldehyde in home made wines and brews, according to the findings of Chemist Doran of the Bureau of the prohibition unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Acetaldehyde is a deadly poison used commercially for silvering mirrors.

Cautious ones who would not accept a drink of questionable liquor but who swear by their own "makings" are delivered a knockout by the results of recent extensive tests made on old and new liquors by the government chemists.

FUSEL OIL NOT HARMFUL

The fusel oil bogey, incidentally, is dissipated by the latest investigations. Fusel oil, according to these findings, is not a harmful ingredient in liquor, nor is it present generally in pure liquor. Fusel oil, it was found, occurs in all whiskey and increases its content as the liquor ages. Accordingly, the soothing to the soul and the palate are found to have a high percentage of fusel oil.

Acetaldehyde, however, is the poison. It is found in nearly all samples made in raids on distilleries using sugar, grain or fruit. It results from the oxydization of the ethyl alcohol generated by improper fermentation. The "ranker" the liquor, the greater content of acetaldehyde.

IN ALL HOME BREWS

"Acetaldehyde occurs in all home-made brews," says Mr. Doran. "It can be eliminated only by treating it in an alcohol column, or by long ageing in wood—both methods being impossible in present-day 'moonshining.'"

Acetaldehyde produces insensibility and is a rapid intoxicant. Its after-effects are extremely harmful.

Copper and zinc salts, also deadly poisons, are found in many illicit liquors. The condenser of the still or the vessel in which the liquor is handled, is found to be the source of these metallic salts.

MAKES DEBUT AS SINGER AT 80

New York, Dec. 5.—At eighty, Mrs. Henry Clay Wright of Austin, Tex., is going to gratify the ambition of a lifetime.

She will make her debut on a New York concert platform Saturday evening, Dec. 15.

Mrs. Wright is small and slight. She has been married fifty-seven years. She has four children and seven grandchildren. She wears soft black dresses with grandmotherly fichus of delicate old lace. But she hasn't a single gray hair; her voice is clear and firm, her step is sure.

As long as she can remember she has waited the chance to train her voice to become a great singer. She once led the village choir in Cypress, Texas, her old home.

VOTE FOR COOLIDGE, JOHNSON PLATFORM

Pierre, S. D., Dec. 5 (I.N.S.).—A tangled situation, with a candidate of one faction facing a platform written by those who opposed him, confronted South Dakota Republicans today, following the action of their State proposal convention in naming President Coolidge as the Republican presidential candidate and adopting the platform framed by supporters of Senator Hiram W. Johnson.

By the State law, the candidate selected must file in writing with the Secretary of State a signed declaration of his willingness to qualify if nominated and elected, "and to adhere to the principles proclaimed in the platform."

The Johnson platform calls for repeal of Esch-Cummins guaranty clause, approval of the soldier bonus, and conscription of wealth for war purposes. If President Coolidge refuses to sign by January 1, the law forbids his name going on the primary ballot.

The Democratic situation was more clear, with McAdoo an eight to one winner over Ford, when Ford supporters withdrew after defeat of their proposal to fuse with the Farmer-Labor party.

The dry enforcement plank of the Democratin platform was not tampered with, despite rumors that leaders in the Reed camp were wet. Both party platforms had a strong prohibition enforcement clause.

GERMAN "SPY" SCARE REVIVED IN BELGIUM

Brussels, Dec. 5.—Several highly organized German espionage centres have been discovered in Antwerp, under the cover of commercial houses of apparently the highest respectability, says the newspaper Le Soir.

The authorities, the newspaper asserts, have found a man who, having membership in a German secret organization that centred in Cologne, was entrusted with an important mission in France, the success of which would have been followed by events of "extreme gravity." As this person has been apprehended, adds Le Soir, there is no longer any danger.

DR. ROBB WILL ADMIT GUILT

Dr. Robb was the man to perform the operation.

These changes in the aspect of the famous Merrimac River suitcase mystery were brought about following a number of conferences between District Attorney Arthur K. Reading, who is prosecuting the case, and Attorney John F. Feeney, counsel for Dr. Robb.

NEW INDICTMENT.

The District Attorney obtained an indictment for illegal surgery. Then came word that Robb is ready to confess his crime. The murder indictment will be not pressed.

The reconstructed story of the death of Mrs. Wolschendorf and the disposal of her body tallies remarkably with the story as assumed by State and county officials.

Mrs. Wolschendorf called at Dr. Robb's office, No. 355 Massachusetts avenue in August, was examined, and a few days later was operated upon. She died on the operating table.

Dr. Robb was frightened. He faced trial for malpractice and being barred from practicing medicine in this country if news of the operation became known. He dismembered the body, placed the limbs in an automobile case, the torso in another and the head in a small hand bag.

THREW TRUNK IN BUSHES.

He drove to Tyngsboro, threw the cases into the Merrimac River, threw the trunk which had contained the cases among some bushes, drove to Keene, N. H., his old home, and bought a new trunk. He felt safe. The woman would be missed, but like others, the mystery would never be explained.

Several days after the discovery of the body William F. Bowen, Mrs. Wolschendorf's employer, who had seen her enter Dr. Robb's office, called on Dr. Robb at his office and demanded to know what had become of the woman. Dr. Robb fled Boston and was not seen here until several weeks later when he gave himself up to District-Attorney Reading.

Soon after Dr. Robb's arrest, Bowen attempted suicide, but was thwarted in the attempt by the timely arrival of physicians.

PERSHING AND EDWARDS IN MAJOR CASE

Distinguished witnesses will appear at a new hearing at Washington probably next week on whether Lieutenant-Colonel Duncan K. Major is to be promoted to the rank of colonel. Lieutenant-Colonel Major was formerly chief of staff of the Twenty-sixth Division.

Major-General C. R. Edwards, State commander of the American Legion, is expected to try to show cause as to why Lieutenant-Colonel Major should not be so advanced. General John J. Pershing, on the other hand, will testify in favor of Lieutenant-Colonel Major's advancement to the full rank.

Another witness against Major will be Major-General Edward L. Logan, Massachusetts National Guard.

It is claimed by Major at a previous investigation he did not get justice and that the coming one will be held with open doors in accordance to his wishes. The former inquiry was a closed-door affair.

In the forthcoming investigation in Congress when his name came up for the proposed promotion officers of the VD Division in France journeyed to Washington to fight the advancement of their former chief of staff.

After the extended investigation the question of confirmation never came to a vote. This was for the reason that the regular army was reduced in size before the time came for the committee to take action either way.

Friends of Major also claim that he did not receive a fair show in the matter of publicity; hence the willingness to have the next hearing with open doors to conform to the wishes of Major and his adherents.

Major was accused of being subordinate, untruthful, temperamentally unfit to hold the rank of colonel and prejudiced against the National Guard.

CURFEW CLANGS FOR FILM SET

Los Angeles, Dec. 5.—Los Angeles writhed on a bed of municipal pain today as opposing civic forces clashed over the permissibility of post-midnight dancing and a Hallowe'en game of chance for charity.

Officers of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers' Association looked about for some place outside of Los Angeles in which to hold their annual ball, as a result of the police commission's refusal to grant them a permit, midnight dancing after midnight.

Seven patrons of the Jinnistan Grotto Circus Carnival waited jail on charges of participating in games of chance designed to raise money for a Masonic Christmas fund.

Resolutions adopted by the Screen Writers' Guild branded the 12 o'clock dancing ordinance as a "midnight curfew law for adults."

Clergymen and police vice squad officers who conducted the raid were hooted and jeered as they led their prisoners away after arresting a number of participants in alleged games of chance.

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1923

Boy Bridegroom to Keep Bride of 50

The AMERICAN has the largest home delivery and the largest circulation of any evening paper in New England.

"Our love is eternal. It will never die," says Mrs. Susan O. Tucker, fifty-year-old bride of sixteen-year-old husband. "I didn't vamp him—he proposed to me."

"It was a real love match. He didn't marry me for money—just for love. He said he'd swing a pick and shovel for me—but he'll never have to. I have plenty for us both."

"I'm going to send him to school after our honeymoon—to Tech. I will train him to manage my business affairs." She's said to be worth a couple of million.

"His people would rob him of his great love and strip him of this opportunity to be a man of position and affairs. But I won't let them—never."

A preliminary blush and Burton S. Tucker, the boy-husband, says: "I know lots of things. Not only do I believe in love, I know it." ....

"Ours was a real love match. I had to plead and plead before she would consent to marry me. Now we're happy, and nobody can make us part."

"She didn't have to buy me. If they annul our marriage they won't gain anything. I'll run away with Susan before I'll give her up."

Current Events

THE HOUSE adjourns, tied up in a deadlock.

The President has not issued his message. It is said by the wise—they are often wrong—that he will declare positively against the soldiers' bonus in addition to indorsing the World Court—gently.

THAT PROGRAM, if carried out in the message, will suit Mr. Coolidge's chief competitors, Hiram Johnson and McAdoo.

McAdoo will be grateful to the President for helping him carry the League of Nations handicap. It's likely that McAdoo will manage to let the President carry the whole load.

HENRY FORD, who will be a dark horse up to the last minute, is abused by prohibitionists for letting his agents dicker with wet sons of Belial in the Northwest.

Ford can reply to the "dry" brothers: "I may deal with the friends of beer in a righteous effort to be President. But I drink nothing but water, and that's more than some of you can say."

THAT THOUGHTFUL trio of Anglo-Saxon statesmen, Charles Francis Murphy, of New York; George Edward Brennan, of Chicago, and Thomas Taggart, of Indiana, have been secluded at French Lick, deciding on the man to be handed the Democratic voters as their candidate for President this year.

But Ford may surprise and grieve them. Could you imagine Ford "listening to reason" about Federal jobs?

THE REPUBLICANS, foolishly, have called their meeting early and will soon announce the date and place of their convention. Democrats will be able to wait, watch the Republicans, and meet later.

Suppose the Republicans should nominate Hiram Johnson, on a genuinely progressive program, with a whoop, and a cheerful outlook. Is it not likely that somebody in the Democratic convention would say: "We want to win this fight. Let us nominate Ford and be done with it. No more worries then."

THEY MAY be wrong, or right, but politicians, as a rule, are convinced that Ford, if nominated by one of the two big parties, would win, beyond all question.

One of the best informed Republican Senators said to this writer: "If the Democrats nominate Ford, millions of Republican farmers will vote for him. Nothing could stop them."

A first-class orator might stampede the Democrats for Ford, especially as he has so many friends in the South, where the real orators live.

FORD COULD say, and probably would: "You farmers know what I did to automobile and tractor prices, as a private citizen. Make me President and I'll do the same to fertilizer prices, railroad rates and farm interest rates."

The farmers are about ready for a Moses to lead them, and "Moses" Ford would have many qualities.

VOWS HE'LL NEVER GIVE UP WIFE

Boy Threatens to Run Away With Great-Aunt if Marriage Is Annulled

Tucker decided they were ready to grant an interview, that is, that "Bud" was, for she wasn't to be quoted.

"I'm no orator," the nervous youth advanced. He attacked his parents—those prim, scrupulous New England parents who had reared him in the environs of the village post office and country store, and who have asked the New Jersey authorities to free their son from this strange union.

His parents, the silk-hatted, unbearded young man accused, though dispassionately, were ruled by selfish and mean emotions in trying to separate him from his wife. They were responsible, he asserted for the circulation of the false story concerning his wife's age. They had told everybody she was fifty years old because they were vindictive, he said!

BLAMES PARENTS.

"They must have said that to get her to give me up, or to get me to give her up, because of the difference in our ages. Well, I think they are selfish to deprive me of my future—a chance to be a big brother with a seat on the stock exchange.

"They want to get some money from her, I think. Maybe they didn't think of this alone. I guess some lawyer saw a chance to get some money for himself and he induced them to have the marriage annulled."

Mrs. Tucker, garbed in the bright-beaded afternoon dress she had worn at the reception for the press on the previous day, hatted and veiled as on that occasion, wearing the same jewelry, a diamond neck lace, busily plied her knife and fork, but her sharp business ears didn't miss a word.

An exclamation from her reminded "Bud" he hadn't really finished his speech.

"We don't fear that our marriage will be annulled," he said, "but if they did succeed in getting it annulled they wouldn't gain anything. I wouldn't go back home. And I'd just get married again—we'd run after each other until we could get married again."

Of course, he doesn't want to go back to South Essex. What can South Essex offer him in lieu of two automobiles, $100 bills for the asking, collegiate clothes and—oh, yes—a loving wife?

SCORNS HOME TOWN.

"I might get to be a postal clerk some day," he said, scornfully.

"I can't understand why my parents are so selfish," he added.

"We'd like to go back to my wife's home in West Gloucester right away," he continued. "But I won't go back unless my parents accept my wife.

"They've tried to blacken her name," he added as an after-thought.

"And here's another thing. I'm not such a young, innocent child. I've known lots of girls. I've been around a lot. I've known women in Nebraska, Mexico, Oregon and California.

His tone was heavy with mysterious meanings. This wasn't his first love.

"I've had lots of experiences with women," he added significantly. But when he was asked if petting was popular in South Essex, he blushed and asked:

BARRED HOME GIRLS.

"With me?"

And somehow indicated by expression of a vague gesture that he hadn't kissed the South Essex girls under the Massachusetts moon or anywhere else.

His bride has announced her intention of sending him to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology after their return to West Gloucester. Her chauffeur will drive him to and from Boston every day. And they will live together in marital bliss, still love-birds.

"Nothing can separate me from my wife," he bristled. "We will always love each other—until death do us part."

But Detective Harry Connolly, of the O'Farrell Detective Agency, supplied some startling information concerning their inseparable union.

According to the detective, Mrs. Tucker came to the O'Farrell Detective Agency, No. 500 Fifth avenue, Saturday, November 4, in a shiny Pierce-Arrow limousines (the one that stands before the Ridgefield, N. J., bungalow) and engaged him and another detective, George Trojan, to bring back her "Bud," who had left her to return to his New England home.

The detectives drove with Mrs. Tucker to West Gloucester, Mass., arriving there early Sunday morning, and were ordered by Mrs. Tucker to locate the missing bridegroom.

Mrs. Tucker waited at the hotel, according to Connelly, and there they brought McGuinness, Bud's chum, who was shown the expensive car and told to find young Tucker and tell him about the Pierce-Arrow.

The car was used as a bait, the detective said, and Tucker, in an old fishing suit and rubber boots, was induced to come to see his wife and the car.

The result of the meeting was that the good-looking boy accompanied his matronly spouse on a motor trip in the Pierce-Arrow.

She had told the detectives that he ran away from her one week after the marriage, while they were living on East Eighty-third street.

Tucker Refused License to Marry in Gloucester

Gloucester, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Susan O. Simpson, wealthy widow of West Gloucester and New York, who married her grand-nephew, Burton S. Tucker, sixteen, of Essex, in Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 2, was blocked in her first attempt to marry him, which was made in this city several weeks ago, it was learned today.

Mrs. Simpson, who is her marriage intentions, filed in New Jersey, gave her own age as forty-six, and her intended husband's age as twenty-six. appeared in the city clerk's office of Gloucester the latter part of September. In company with Burton Tucker, she rode to City Hall in her automobile, but he remained in the car while she went inside to file the marriage intention.

In the application which she filled out, she represented her own age as forty-two and Burton's as sixteen. She was informed by the clerk that she could not obtain a license without written permission of Burton's parents, by reason of their age, and a special permission from the probate court.

Mrs. Simpson requested the clerk to mention the incident to anyone.

"You know my husband, Dr. Simpson, lived here for a number of years," said Mrs. Simpson, "and I would like you to keep this quiet."

She called again the next day to make further inquiries and this time she informed the clerk that she and Burton would get married any way, even if they had to go to a state where they could legally marry. She suggested New Jersey as such a state. She did not call again or make further application here.

Mrs. Susan Olive Burnham Simpson Tucker was born in West Gloucester, the daughter of Abel and Sarah Burnham, and, according to the birth records, she is 52 years old.

A blue ribbon winner in the Blue Orpington class exhibited at Congress Hall, Chelsea, pecked a $250 diamond from a ring on the hand of George A. Hennessy, a chicken fancier of Forest Hills street, Jamaica Plain.

John Strom, No. 3 Ash street, Somerville, owner of the hen, refused to sell for $25 and the hen was taken to Chelsea police headquarters and locked up in cell No. 7. A complaint against the owner of the Orpington will be asked. If the complaint cannot be issued, an injunction will be sought to prevent anyone from interfering with the bejeweled hen.

NURSE SUES CLUBMAN AS JILT

Springfield Widow Says Rich Realtor Wooed Her for Six Months

Springfield, Dec. 4.—Harry A. Pheland, wealthy clubman and retired real estate broker is named defendant in a breach of promise suit brought against him by Mrs. Elsie Paige, widow and nurse of No. 56 High street.

Mrs. Paige, who is 39 years old, asks $10,000, alleging that she and Pheland agreed to marry but that Pheland refused to carry out the bargain. Suit was filed in Superior Court for Mrs. Paige by the law firm of Granfield and Noonan.

Pheland, who is 45 years old, has retained City Solicitor Josiah Dearborn. Mrs. Paige alleges Pheland courted her for five months and wooed so persistently that she finally consented to marry him. Mrs. Paige did not receive an engagement ring.

Pheland lives with his sister, Mrs Susan P. Seymour, at No. 105 Bowdoin street. Mrs Seymour is a physician and the widow of Stephen E. Seymour, who before his death a few years ago was a prominent lawyer and land promoter.

FALL RIVER MAN HELD IN $31,000 THEFT

Fall River, Dec. 5.—W. B. Gooding, alias H. A. Holt, for whom a search warrant was instituted by the police last June, has been arrested by Chief Constable J. E. Fortune of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., according to a telegram received by the local authorities.

Arrangements are being perfected with District-Attorney Stanley P. Hall of Taunton so that the prisoner may be brought back to stand trial on a recent indictment for alleged larceny of property valued at $31,000 from the Thomas Motor Sales Company of this city.

ASK LENIENCY FOR CAMBRIDGE BURGLARS

Judge Fred M. Sisk of the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court was to pass sentence today on the three young Cambridge bandits who pleaded guilty to a series of daylight robberies. Speculation is rife whether or not Judge Sisk will heed the plea of Captain Patrick Hurley of the Cambridge police for leniency. The youths are Thomas P. Galligan, Barry J. Noonan and Lawrence O'Toole. Captain Hurley has recommended that the O'Toole boy be placed on probation and that the other two be sent to Concord Reformatory for an indefinite term instead of being committed to State's Prison.

COUE UNABLE TO AID SUFFERER

London, Dec. 5.—There was a pathetic scene in a Park Lane flat where M. Coue, of auto-suggestion fame, unavailingly attempted to use his powers to aid Mrs J. G. Edwards, a Yorkshire woman, who for four years has suffered from sleeping sickness.

Many specialists have treated Mrs. Edwards without result. There was only a moaning response from her when Coue told her to get up and walk.

Roadhouse and Auto Pickup Start Hundreds Down Primrose Path

Curb Country Inns and Missing Girl Problem Will Be Simplified, Policewoman McAuliffe Says

In this, the third of a series of articles written for the Boston American by Irene McAuliffe, member of the Boston Police Department, the policewoman tells what the automobiles and the roadhouses are doing toward dragging down our young girls.

By IRENE McAULIFFE,

Member of Boston's police department, formerly of the police department at Washington, D. C.

Roadhouses and automobiles go hand in hand. And they are doing almost as much today toward pulling down our American girls around the large cities as all the other evil agencies put together. Boston and vicinity is no exception.

Remove the roadhouses and a large part of the great girl problem would be solved, in my opinion. Every night there are hundreds of young girls in these places of iniquity taking their first drink, taking their first step toward a life that will some day leave them as hard and calloused as Rose, of whom I wrote in the preceding articles.

WANDERING AROUND THE ROAD WAS A YOUNG MAN

THE FIRST FALSE STEP OF HUNDREDS

IRENE McAULIFFE AND INCIDENTS OF HER STORY

Mothers, right here, within a radius of twenty-five miles of Boston there are at least a score of roadhouses which apparently are immune from interference of the authorities.

It isn't difficult to guess why. Most of these objectionable places are located in small towns outside the limits and jurisdiction of Boston. Police organization is somewhat sketchy, to say the least. The roadhouses feel perfectly safe and the motto of most of them seems to be:

"Yes, we stand for murder here, provided you clean up the blood!"

Liquor is obtainable in these places. Automobile parties are welcomed with wide open arms. Why not? It is the automobile party that keeps these places going.

Of course it is POSSIBLE for young people to visit these places and eat food and dance decently. I say it is POSSIBLE, but it is not USUAL. These places depend upon automobile custom entirely.

OUTDO BARBARY COAST.

These resorts are there to sell liquor and grant the requests of the motorists. They are there to rent rooms and extend loose privileges which the most terrible back room dive of a Barbary Coast would have hesitated to extend in the days of old.

It is a fact that the first false step taken by hundreds of young girls whose names later find their way to the "girls missing" books of the police, is taken via the automobile and these cheap roadhouses.

Mothers, do you take this matter seriously enough? Do you know where your daughter is going when she steps gayly out of the house in the evening and is whisked away in the automobile of a dapper young male friend? Do you know whether or not your daughter is going to one of these dens of iniquity? If not, I beg of you to take heed now before it is too late.

Space would not permit me to tell of the cases I know of wherein disaster has followed the wretched roadhouse parties in which innocent young girls were the victims.

ROADHOUSE TO DEATH

One morning I was called out at 2 o'clock. There had been an automobile accident near my home. When I arrived at the scene I found a big red touring car lying across a stone wall. Wandering around the road was a young man mumbling stupidly, while the odor of liquor fairly oozed forth from his lips.

Crushed almost to a pulp beneath the wrecked machine was a beautiful young girl of not more than seventeen summers. Another young girl was lying unconscious in a field over the wall. Another young man lay but a few feet from her.

It was just a little party of four returning from a visit to one of the roadhouses a few miles outside of Boston. It was the old story of liquor and speeding.

I went to the mother of that girl and broke the terrible news. I shall never forget that mother. She seemed to bear up under the death, but the fact that her daughter was killed in a drunken party was almost too much for her old heart to stand.

AUTO PICKUPS TRAGEDY.

Another night I was returning home when I came upon another machine wrecked almost at the same spot. A man lay in the road moaning while the blood was spurting from his leg which was nearly severed. Under the overturned machine was a young girl, screaming and yelling as though she were dying. I bound up the man's leg and took him and the girl to the hospital.

There I learned that he had picked up this slip of a sixteen-year-old girl on the street in a suburb of Boston and had taken her out "just for a little ride."

The ride led to a roadhouse—and liquor—and still worse. Then came the wild ride home that ended in a near tragedy. But the worst discovery of all was when I learned that the man was married, had a wife and two children waiting for him at home. We kept it out of the papers. Imagine what would have happened had it reached the press.

Hundreds of girls every year see a beautiful automobile go by: wave their hands at the driver. Then comes an invitation and "just a little ride." The first night may pass well enough and possibly the next. But the sooner or later this "just a little ride" leads to a despicable roadhouse, liquor, a rented back room and then it is too late.

(Another installment of this series will appear in tomorrow's Boston American.)

REPUBLICAN FIGHT ENDS IN HOUSE

Factions Agree to Elect Gillett Today; New Split Looms in the Senate

Washington, Dec. 5.—President Coolidge's annual message to Congress will be delivered at a joint session of the Senate and House shortly after noon tomorrow. This decision was reached today after the White House communicated with leaders at the Capitol.

The President's budget message will be read Friday.

Washington, Dec. 5 (I.N.S.)—The insurgent Progressives who held the whip hand in the 68th Congress have come out victorious in their first test of strength with the Republican regulars.

In striking fashion they have confirmed the fact that their balance of power is real and not assumed.

This was the well-nigh unanimously accepted version today of the so-called compromise between the insurgents and the regulars, under which the insurgents will abandon their opposition to the re-election of Speaker F. H. Gillett of Massachusets and permit the organization of Congress for business after two days of futile deadlock.

As a price for their yielding the insurgents demanded and got from the leadership of the regulars, who at first refused to treat with them, an opportunity to revise the rules.

WILL ALTER RULES.

And the fact that the Democrats themselves stood out for a marked liberalization makes it certain that the rules governing the Sixty-eighth Congress will be materially different from those under which the overwhelming Republican majority of the Sixty-seventh Congress rode roughshod over all opposition.

Both sides regarded the result of the two days' test of strength with satisfaction. The insurgents were satisfied because they have convinced the regular leadership that they must be reckoned with and because they have a promise of a revision of the rules. The regulars are not cringing over the results of the fight, but they are nevertheless satisfied that they have shown the country the "obstructionist tactics" of the insurgents. And finally, the regulars now know where they stand and will be able to plan accordingly.

COOLIDGE TAKES HAND.

There is reason to believe that the White House had a great deal to do with the arranging of the peace conference between the insurgents and the regulars, which lasted far into the night at the Capitol.

The two-days' lineup and the continued postponement of President Coolidge's appearance with his message has constituted a source of embarrassment to the White House. For two days the special has been for the country of a Republican Congress and a Republican administration held impotent and helpless in the hands of a determined little bloc of twenty-two Western Republicans and the washing of so much family linen in public was not held to be good for the party.

The House approved the completed organization in jig time today. Speaker Gillett was scheduled for reelection on the first ballot, the ninth ballot of the session, and the rest of the routine organization rapidly completed.

NEW SPLIT IN SENATE.

Meanwhile Congress was threatened with a replica of the House dispute on the Senate side, where the insurgents in that body are up in arms against the plan of Senator A. B. Cummins, Republican, Iowa, to retain both the presidency of the Senate and the chairmanship of the powerful interstate commerce committee.

Thus far the Senate has avoided fights by sedately meeting and adjourning. The fireworks are expected as soon as President Coolidge has laid his message before a joint session.

YANKEES NAMES ON BASEBALL FOR XMAS FUND

Hundreds of letters have been received by the management of the Wilbur Theatre from radio enthusiasts who "listened-in" on the opening performance of "The Lady in Ermine," which was broadcasted by Shepard Stores to benefit the American's Helping Hand Christmas Basket Fund.

These letters came from all parts of the country and expressed happiness over hearing the tuneful melodies of this wonderful, romantic operetta.

It is of scientific interest to radio enthusiasts to know that persons who "listened-in" on the performance heard the music nine-tenths of a second quicker than those sitting in the front orchestra seats at the Wilbur Theatre.

SOUVENIR BANGLES

Patrons of the theatre were enabled to enjoy the unique privilege of speaking to thousands of radio fans all over the country when, after the show, they were allowed to hold forth in a box where a microphone had been set up by experts connected with the Shepard Stores.

In addition, a large group of attractive young ladies made a substantial collection from the audience, giving to all who contributed souvenir Santa Claus bangles.

Nancy Gibbs, leading lady of the production, wears a $5000 ermine cape, during the second act. This cape was so gorgeous that the feminine portion of the audience was filled with admiration from the moment it was seen.

In connection with the appearance of this charming musical show in Boston, two unusual displays of ermine are being made by Boston merchants. Otto J. Piehler of No. 389 Boylston street, is displaying a window filled with this royal fur while the Shepard Stores have two Tremont street windows filled with it.

BASEBALL TROPHY.

One of the most unusual gifts in aid of the Basket Fund is a new baseball containing the signatures of the New York "Yankees" who won the world's championship last Fall.

This baseball is the gift of "Stonewall" Jackson, the widely known Fenway Park announcer, who desires that it be auctioned and the proceeds turned over to the Fund.

The ball contains the signatures in ink, of the twenty-three members of the world's championship team. That of "Babe" Ruth stands out prominently.

Here is a souvenir worth its weight in gold to any real baseball fan. What is the Basket Fund Director offered for it? Bids will be announced as received. The bidding will continue until December 20. It is to be sold to the person who offers the largest amount of money between now and then. Come on, fans!

QUINCY DANCE.

Mrs. Orrie D. Williams of No. 28 Braintree avenue, Quincy, reports a heavy sale of tickets for her fourth annual entertainment and dance in behalf of the Fund. This party will be conducted in Alpha Hall, Monday night, December 17. There will be dancing to the music of Frankie Ward's famous orchestra.

Among those who will appear on the entertainment program are: Ethel Hon in oriental dances; "Baby" Josephine Leonard, South Boston child prodigy; "Baby" Eleanor Lee, talented Medford kiddie; Selma Harris, the baby with the big voice; and Frank Melvin, Frisco dancer. Other artists Harold McTighe and Elizabeth Clark, ballroom specialty; Marie Kearns, in unusual dances; the favorite Feist Trio; Jess Audella and Grace Kerivan, popular studio dances; Mae Carney, "Boston's own Maggie Kline," in songs. Carl Moore will accompany the artists. Kashryn Sloane's pupils will stage a mock wedding.

CABARET TONIGHT.

A cabaret and dancing party in aid of the Fund will be conducted tonight in the Back Bay School of Dancing, No. 387 Massachusetts avenue, under the direction of Louise J. Lyons and Florence McGuire-Herrick Studios of Dancing.

Those who will take part on Miss Lyons portion of the program are: Mildred Flannery, Rose Richards, Genevieve Hackett, Gertrude Fennie, Evelyn Spellman, Marguerite Thompson, Archibald Thompson, Anna Marie Dunn, Marie C. Murphy, Geraldine Tallan, Bernadine McDade, Bill Callan, Josephine Leary, Ann Brady, Eugenia Kellher, Eleanor O'Neill, Mildred Fitzgerald and Mary Sullivan.

Mrs. Herrick's contribution to the program includes: Helen O'Neill, Louise Russell, Helen Fallen, Dorothy McKay, Frances Crosby, Edna Crosby, Dorothy Sullivan, Alice Terry, Catherine Gallen, Mildred Millerick and Agatha Crowley.

SCORES FAUNCE AS 'RELIGIOUS CUCKOO'

New York, Dec. 5.—Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, president of Brown University, and other modernists in religion, were characterized as "religious cuckoos" by Dr. Thomas Shields of Toronto, at the third of the Baptist Fundamentalist meetings.

Dr. Shields, who is head of the Baptist Bible Union, had previously stated that the conferring of a degree by a Baptist University on Dr. Faunce was a "disgrace to the Baptist denomination."

Dr. Faunce's reply that the fundamentalists were likely to slough off the main body of the Baptists and form another denomination brought forth the assertion from Dr. Shields that the Union would get out of the denomination. The modernists, he asserted, were just waiting for his group in these nominations "to build colleges and schools, pay off the debts and then get out."

"We will do nothing of the sort," Dr. Shields declared. "The fundamentalists throw down the gauntlet to Mr. Faunce and all his kind. We are willing to fight this issue to a finish with these religious cuckoos until they no longer foul our nests."

Dr. William B. Riley of Minneapolis asserted there could be no acceptance of any terms dictated by "those overlords of our denomination who deny the Scriptures."

Dr. R. E. Neighbor of Elyria, Ohio, was the first speaker at the conference to criticise other denominations. The churches which do not require submersion in their baptismal rites, he declared, are ignoring the symbolism of the Bible.

Bride of Singer

JANE GREY

New York, Dec. 5.—Linking of the dramatic and operatic stages by another romance was divulged today. Jane Grey, leading woman in Belasco productions, was married in Stamford, November 15, to Ricardo Martin, leading tenor with the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

Ricardo Martin

The marriage, kept a close secret, was disclosed by close friends following the return of the couple from a honeymoon in Atlantic City.

Both will remain in their chosen professions, it was said.

BRIGHTON MAN ROBBED OF $90 AT GUN POINT

At the point of a revolver, Joseph Krailus, No. 59 Wexford street, Brighton, was held up near his home today and robbed of more than ninety dollars.

Charles Washkus, nineteen years old, cousin of Krailus, is accused by Krailus as having staged the robbery. The police are looking for the youth.

According to Krailus, he was proceeding down Wexford street when his cousin leaped from an ambush, thrust a revolver in his face and commanded him to turn over his money. Krailus says he at first thought it was a joke, but decided differently when his assailant snorted:

"Give up—I mean business."

He described Washkus as five feet eight inches tall, 145 pounds, dark complexion, dark suit, dark overcoat and brown soft hat.

DRINKS IODINE FOR COUGH MEDICINE

Mrs. Anna Petrini, thirty-eight years old, of No. 43 Patten street, West Roxbury, was removed to the City Hospital after she drank iodine at her home by mistake for cough medicine. Dr. Hartwell Sibley ordered her removed to City Hospital, where her name was placed on the danger list, but physicians are hopeful of her recovery.

PANIC AT LYNN FIRE STOPPED BY ACTRESSES

The lives of forty guests at the Hotel Ambassador, No. 216 Washington street, Lynn, in the heart of the apartment houses district, were saved by the alertness of four Lynn actresses, who, when fire broke out in one of the hotel rooms, aroused the occupants from their slumbers and assisted them to the street.

Ida Moulton

Miami Campbell

Helen Edgecomb

Lorna Carroll

The actresses, all members of the Century players of the Lynn Auditorium Theatre, are: Miss Miami Campbell, leading lady; Miss Ida Moulton, second lead; Miss Priscilla Knowlton, character woman, and Miss Lorna Carroll, the ingenue.

The fire broke out in the room of Herbert Rowe. It was discovered by James Dauphine, Miss Campbell, who rooms on the first floor, smelled smoke and rushed out of her suite. Assisted by Miss Helen Edgecomb, manager of the hotel, she turned in the fire alarm and then aroused her companions in the theatre company who were sleeping soundly. Miss Carroll, after rescuing several costly gowns, groped her way through the smoke-filled corridor to the street. She then rushed back and aroused the occupants on the third floor.

Official Chaperone to Watch Wellesley Girls in City

Chaperoning at Wellesley is a problem. Ever since the fracas when four undergraduates stayed out all night the subject has been under discussion.

Now the College House of Representatives proposes that an approved chaperone take up her residence at some hotel in Boston, and that the girls report to her whenever they spend an evening in the city. It will be her job to see that they are tucked in bed early enough to conform with the collegiate idea of proprieties.

ENGLISH ORDER ON KLAN LINES, FIGHTS GAMING

London, Dec. 5 (Universal Cable).—England is having its first modern taste of Ku Klux Klanism in the activities of the "Most Noble Order of Crusaders."

That secret society, whose objects were consecrated at a special Westminster Abbey service last week, was founded two years ago. It now numbers more than 5,000 members mostly drawn from exclusive social circles. Its avowed aim is to promote mediaeval chivalry, and members, on ritualistic occasions, wear gowns and hoods. The Duke of York attended the Abbey service.

The order is waging war on gambling dens. The Grand Scribe of the Crusaders states that members have discovered the existence of country mansions where the "war rich" encourage heavy gambling among their guests, especially scions of noble families.

General Sir Edward Bethune, who is the Grand Keeper of Records, says: "Our methods may be a little outside the law, but, personally, I do not care a jot if they are."

CAMERA MAN AT BABY CLINIC HAS TROUBLES

"Nurse, find a couple of pretty babies!"

Nurse doesn't move, but fifty-five of the fifty-five mothers at the baby clinic in the Municipal Building, South End, stick Johnny, Jimmy, Mary, Betty and the rest of the fifty-five infants in front of the camera.

"One at a time please!" Perspiration comes to the brow of the man with the picture machine.

Twenty land on the table—each mother's "one."

Persuasion, gentle force, threats are used. Some of the infant Apollos and Dianas are removed—to the edge of the table.

CAMERA MAN BEGS.

"Please, please," the camera man begs. "Get 'em away."

They're hauled off. Johnny Smith remains.

"Smile darling," the fond mother coos.

"Yah!" and Johnny wriggles out of focus.

"He was fine a minute ago. You should have snapped it then." The camera man is rebuked. "Now, sweetheart, muvva's own, watch for the birdie."

Little Johnny is removed. He's had his chance. Fifty-four more descend on the table. Fifty-three are removed and another hopeful is proudly posed.

The side-lines appeal to the nurses, the reporter, the general atmosphere, "Get him to take my baby's picture. He asked for pretty babies."

Being peace loving the reporter veers off. "Ask him! The photographer chooses his own subjects."

"My husband knows a man on your paper. Can't you have my baby's picture taken."

"Sure, ask the photographer."

And the photographer, failing fast but still alive, starts to bunch them in groups and snap blanks.

There are six booths at the baby clinic. A medical specialist gives his examination and advice in each one of the six, but the most popular table in the place is where the babies to have his picture taken for the papers.

Dr. Frederick J. Bailey was assisted Tuesday by Dr. David P. Hayes, Dr. Harry B. Levine, Dr. William H. Robinson, Dr. Harrison Hartley, Dr. Ransom F. Carver and Dr. Herman Peterson.

WOMAN SAVES BOY IN RIVER PLUNGE

North Andover, Dec. 5.—Three-year-old Pershey R. Wilcox, Jr., of No. 130 Union street, was rescued from drowning in the Shawsheen River when Mrs. James McConish of the same address plunged into the water, fully dressed, and brought the little boy to shore.

Mrs. James McConish

F. B. Wilson, Jr.

The woman collapsed after she reached the shore and both she and the child, who was unconscious, were given medical aid.

The incident occurred at a point of the river known at Perry's Swimming Hole, where the Fernley boy and his cousin, Ruth Hawke, three-year-old daughter of Fred J. Hawke of No. 8 Union street, were playing fishing with a long pole for a rod.

The boy was precipitated into the water when the bank upon which the children were standing collapsed.

Vanderbilt and Bride Due Here New Year's, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

© Harris & Ewing.

MRS. WILLIAM PHILLIPS

A recent lecture of Mrs. William Phillips (Caroline Astor Drayton), wife of the Under Secretary of State. The Summer and late Fall finds the family at "Highover," their North Shore place at North Beverly.

THE brass knocker at No. 8 Louisburg square shines like a mirror, and everything is "clean as a whistle" for William Vanderbilt and his bride to take possession of the place.

When young Vanderbilt—whose share of the world's goods is rather astounding—and lovely Emily O'Neill Davies were married last month, all Gotham buzzed with talk of their brilliant wedding.

At the time it was rumored that the couple would come very shortly to the Louisburg square house. But now it seems that they are continuing on their wedding journey and won't be established here until New Year's. Sometime this week, however, they will drop in to inspect the house.

Mrs. Vanderbilt.

In the meantime the fashionable world of Boston continues to wonder if the youthful master of "Oakland Farm," the enormous estate at Portsmouth, R. I.—just outside Newport—which Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt left to his son.

ONE of the most charming hostesses of the capital is Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the Under Secretary of State.

During the Winter months a number of important functions are held at "Beauvoir," the Washington home of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips.

In the Summertime the family comes up to the North Shore, their place at North Beverly known as "Highover," with the master of the house joining them whenever his duties permit.

There are no less than five little Phillipses, ranging from Miss Beatrice, who's nine years old, to a tiny daughter, so that "Highover" is a very merry place.

Mr. Phillips belongs to the Boston family of that name, and everyone hereabouts has followed with keen interest his successful diplomatic career. He's a Harvard man of the '00 class and a member of the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet and Myopia Hunt Clubs. His wife was formerly Miss Caroline Astor Drayton of New York.

Mrs. Ladd.

I NOTE that Anna Coleman Ladd, known in social circles as Mrs. Maynard, is sculpturing the two tablets for the monument being erected by the Frank B. Amatel Post, No. 113, American Legion, at Manchester-by-the-Sea. The war memorial is to be completed by Christmas.

MERCHANT SUES MOTHER-IN-LAW FOR $25,000

Suit for $25,000 was entered in the Essex County Probate Court, Salem, by Benjamin K. Axelrod, cotton goods manufacturer of Bedford street, Boston, against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Fannie Saffran, No. 631 Western avenue, West Lynn, for alleged alienation of the affections of his former wife, Mrs. Esther Axelrod.

Mrs. Axelrod was granted a divorce in Middlesex County last Friday on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, and was given custody of her nine-year-old daughter.

DENIES ALLEGATIONS.

Through her daughter Mrs. Saffran denied the allegations of Axelrod and declared that instead of causing trouble between the couple she had done all in her power to bring them together. She said she not only liked Axelrod at first but that she did not believe in divorce when it was possible to avoid it.

The first interference of the mother-in-law came, it was learned, when Axelrod was absent in Detroit for five months. Then Mrs. Saffran supported her daughter and grand-daughter during Axelrod's absence.

CHARGES DESERTION.

This was repeated on her part twice, it is claimed, while Axelrod was absent on extended Canadian trips, one of the trips having been begun while the young wife was recuperating from a serious operation. Last March he is alleged to have left his wife for good, when she reproached him for the loss of a dwelling given to Mrs. Axelrod by her mother.

Axelrod is alleged to have mortgaged the house when he went into business in Boston and to have failed to make payments on the mortgage. The mortgage was foreclosed.

ROWDIES BEAT UP BRITISH CANDIDATES

London, Dec. 5 (I.N.S.).—The British election campaign wound up today, and tomorrow the fate of the Baldwin Cabinet will be decided.

The close of the campaign was marked by an increase in violence and rowdyism. Many candidates were threatened or attacked.

Lord and Lady Eustace Percy were injured in a riot at Hastings.

A free-for-all fight occurred at Battersea. Windows and electric lights were smashed, women fainted and several persons were hurt.

At a meeting in Bermondsey Mrs. Clarry, wife of the Conservative candidate, was kicked and pelted with mud by rioters.

A heavy vote, especially by the women, is expected. It is believed in many quarters that the Tories will have a slight majority.

But Liberal and labor leaders claim the Tories will not be strong enough to put through Baldwin's proposed protective tariff.

There are more women candidates than in any previous general election, the most notable being Viscountess Astor, who has been making a fight against bitter opposition in Plymouth. Her re-election is conceded.

Fifty candidates have been returned without opposition. This leaves 544 to be elected tomorrow. The total membership of the House is 615.

G. F. White, Liberal candidate in West Derbyshire, died yesterday of pneumonia and consequently no election will be held in that constituency.

THREE HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS ARE EXPELLED FOR SMOKING

Three students, one a senior and the other freshmen, were expelled from the West Roxbury High School by Headmaster Morris J. Lacey after he had discovered them smoking on the school grounds.

The senior is Irving Ball. The freshmen are James B. Crockwell and William Eastman.

Following the expulsion of the three students, Headmaster Lacey called a meeting of the teachers and issued a warning that smoking on the school grounds was prohibited and that violators of the rule would be punished by expulsion.

Headmaster Lacey refused to comment further on the situation beyond that the three students had been permanently suspended.

$400,000 SUIT OF MRS. CARD SETTLED BY AGREEMENT

Settlement has been announced of the equity suit between eighty-eight year-old Mary J. Card of Mansfield and Asa S. and Helen Trayes, Clarence A. Barnes and Howard F. Butler, the latter two being lawyers. This case has occupied the attention of the Supreme Court for several months and there have been several spirited legal contests waged in connection with it.

By the terms of the agreement, which will be recorded in the Supreme Court today, Mrs. Card will receive $8,000 a year during her life, a mortgage is to be lifted from her property by the payment of $4,000 and all expenses incidental to the litigation will be paid by the respondents.

By the action filed in court, Mrs. Card hoped to recover $400,000. Most of the fight was directed against Trayes. Mrs. Trayes was formerly Mrs. Helen L. Wellington and was companion to Mrs. Card. While acting as such, Mrs. Card entrusted $190,000 in her care.

Holyoke—John F. Cronin (re-elected).

STATE REPRESENTATIVES

Fourth Essex District—Dr. William J. Greenlee.
Twelfth Fitchburg District—Henry A. Esterbrook.

Eleven mayors and two State representatives were elected in Massachusetts cities. Ten cities elected minor officers, Haverhill returning two Socialists to the Board of Aldermen.

Northampton, President Coolidge's home town, elected Edward J. Woodhouse, a Smith College professor and a Virginia Democrat, mayor over William Cordes, Republican, by a margin of seventy votes.

William A. Bullivant was swept into the chair now occupied by Mayor Manning in a Republican landslide in Brockton. Republicans gained a majority in both the city council and the board of aldermen in that city.

Ex-Representative James M. Hurley, non-partisan, defeated Mayor Edward T. Simoneau in Marlboro. Hurley is the first Mayor to be elected under the Plan B city government which goes into effect in Marlboro January 1.

Dr. William J. Gloenier, elected to the House from the fourth Essex district, defeated Charles J. Morrill of Haverhill by fifty-eight votes.

Morrill, for years a member of the Legislature, was the only member of the Socialist party on Beacon Hill.

NEWPORT A. O. H. CONDEMNS KLAN

Newport, R. I., Dec. 5.—Division 1, A. O. H., unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the Ku Klux Klan and pledged support to Mayor Curley of Boston, for his fight against the organization.

King Kleagle F. Eugene Farnsworth of Maine was condemned for his "attempt to pollute the minds of loyal citizens and Americans." The action was taken after State Representative Martin, president of the order, had received a letter inviting him to join the Klan.

LYNN PASTOR SEEKS $900 BACK SALARY

The Rev. Jerome K. Miller, for nine years pastor of the Zion Baptist Church in Lynn, yesterday announced his intention of returning to his old home in Goldsborough, N. C., as soon as he can collect $900 which he claims the church owes him in back pay.

He has expressed his willingness to give a discount of $200 for prompt settlement of his account, but declares that if the offer is not accepted he will take court action to obtain the money.

CONSIDER the backbone of your 1924 campaign.

If you are planning to dominate the country by using a great number of mediums of small circulation and no domination, you're giving your campaign a wishbone instead of a backbone!

The country's most successful advertisers have definitely proved for themselves that advertising success follows close on the heels of large circulation. Circulation is the most important thing in any campaign.

We suggest The American Weekly, the World's Greatest Advertising Buy, for the backbone of YOUR campaign, because—

The American Weekly has a circulation of MORE than 4,500,000 copies every week!

Four million five hundred thousand families buy it, and more than EIGHTEEN MILLIONS of people read it, and buy from it!

This is more than a quarter of all the people in the entire United States who can be reached by the printed English word. And almost DOUBLE the number of readers of the NEXT greatest national medium!

And for this great coverage, its line rate is but a little more than half that of the next largest medium!

The American Weekly Magazine deserves to be the backbone of your campaign!

Ask us, on your letterhead, to show you why.

SHERIFF FACES TRIAL IN 'DRY' BRIBERY CASE

Uxbridge, Dec. 5.—Deputy Sheriff Harry J. Flynn, accused of having coerced a liquor "spotter" to accept a bribe from a Millville hotel proprietor, will appear before Sheriff Albert Richardson of Worcester County in Worcester Saturday.

The liquor agent who brings the charges is John Vaughn. He claims that Sheriff Flynn persuaded him to accept $20 for returning liquor he claimed to have bought from John Colbert, proprietor of the Millville Hotel.

The claim that he is the victim of a "frame-up" was made by Sheriff Flynn during a hearing in the Uxbridge District Court, when John Colbert, proprietor of the Millville Motel, who is alleged to have bribed Vaughn was arraigned on charges of liquor selling and keeping.

Colbert was cleared of both charges and his discharge is regarded as a partial vindication of Sheriff Flynn.

Vaughn complained to the district attorney's office in Worcester that the deputy sheriff had persuaded him to accept the bribe. As a result an investigation was begun and a representative of the district attorney's office was present at the trial of Colbert.

NEW OPERETTA AT WILBUR IS DELIGHT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

VIRTUE gathers its own reward sooner or later—even among uncomplaining, patient playgoers. That point was settled at the Wilbur Theatre last evening when Walter Woolf, Nancy Gibbs and Harry K. Morton took a firm hold on "The Lady in Ermine" and made everybody happy.

Somewhere, possibly, there are otherwise well meaning folk who believe the day of light opera is passed—gone forever, buried under a mass of squirming syncopation and asthmatic saxophones.

But don't you believe it, for there is still life and satisfying moments in musical entertainment that depends upon its melody for character instead of slap-stick comedy, bared legs and dialect comedians.

RESTFUL EVENING.

An evening with "The Lady in Ermine" proved itself more than happily entertaining—it was almost restful. Certainly no operetta of this or last season has given the hard pressed theatregoer more cause for belated contentment.

How much of the original "Lady in Ermine" remains in the adaptation revealed at the Wilbur is not apparent, though the book shows signs of having been edited to suit the frivolities of Mr. Morton, who flitted through the performance in his own style, dancing here and there and supplying cheerful remarks that did not bear the continental stamp. Of course, the music of Jean Gilbert and Alfred Goodman was not betrayed into the hands of revising musicsmiths, and as a result your joy was left untrammeled.

CATCHY MELODIES.

While the best of the entertainment was found in irresistible melodies that fell with sweet sounds upon your ears, the book possessed qualities of its own. It may have been romantic operetta, but there were moments when drama stepped in and made you take a new grip on your chair.

Walter Woolf, who always sings well and looks better, did not disappoint his friends or treat his numbers unkindly, and Nancy Gibbs made a double killing with both charm and voice. "Mariana," a duet by Mr. Woolf and Miss Gibbs, will be remembered and whistled. Mr. Morton's eccentric dancing and frolicksome comedy fitted nicely into the proceedings, especially during a solo dance in Spanish style by Mlle. Isabelle Rodriguez, in which for the first time a Spanish dance, interpolated in what look like Italian operetta, shed new and brighter colors.

"The Lady in Ermine" is worth meeting at any time; you're bound to like her.

ALLIED TROOPS TO QUIT CITIES IN THE RUHR

Paris, Dec. 5 (A.P.)—The troops occupying the Ruhr are gradually to be concentrated in camps outside the cities, it was explained by French government officials today.

The design is to make the occupation less burdensome and irritating to the Germans, in reward for their apparent disposition to abandon hostility toward the occupation and to co-operate with the allied regime.

There is no idea of evacuating the Ruhr at present, it was stated, and the French troops will be maintained developments, but will be taken at their existing strength pending of the streets and out of the cities.

Spooning Church Pastor Obtains Illuminating Answers to Questionnaire

By WALTER B. FORD

Milford, Dec. 5.—Knocks and bouquets are what the young women of this town handed the young men, when the Rev. Louis Winthrop West, pastor of the Pine Street Baptist Church, sent to them their series of questionnaires as to the good and bad of their boy friends and what they were looking for in a husband.

A lot of these girls know what they are talking about—or should—as the pastor has turned the vestry of the church into a town courting preserve for their accommodation. That is on Sunday afternoons.

He is the first New England pastor to do that. He says it is a huge success.

Opinions differ, but the Rev. Mr. West finds results encouraging. He says the girls as a whole are charitable.

"LONG LIVE THE MEN!"

"Long live the men!" exclaims one young woman at the end of her questionnaire. She even wrote it in capitals.

Perusal of these letters from young girls and women, including one teacher, one bank clerk and one "hello" girl, are illuminating. They are intensely human. They make a fellow believe he would have a chance to win one of them after all if he had the questionnaire replies to go by.

Well, listen to the girls.

One naively implies that they DO when encouraged. She does not enter into a discussion of the merits of encouragement.

"Let alone, a decent young man is apt to mind his own business," the same young lady continues. She certainly lets them down easy.

"Yet, they are only human," she adds in extenuation. "They aim to please and if they see you want to flirt they'll help you."

"My ideal would be a man among men," writes another on Pastor West's questionnaire paper.

"He must command the respect of everyone, his character unexcelled," she adds.

Several of them explained where they fitted in at the opening courting conclave in the vestry of the church last Sunday. If they all get in next Sunday they will have to start out early.

MUST BE AN ATHLETE.

Going back to another young woman who answered the questionnaire, we find that her ideal "must be a good talker." He also must be an athlete, music and literature must appeal to him, he must be all that is noble and good, he must recognize religion and its worth, he must be true to his religious convictions, he must like the outdoors, his fundamental principles of life must be "laid sure and strong," he must be a good mixer, dance a little "when occasion demands," and "work with as much vim as he plays."

On the question of what HE would have to give up to win HER, one young woman answers it this way:

"He could smoke if he wanted to if he kept the ashes off the floor.

"I would not countenance drinking, flirting, out nights and LADY FRIENDS."

"Swearing and gambling would also be on the blacklist."

Perhaps it is all well summed up in the closing paragraph of the answer sent in by one of the Milford young women.

In response to what she thinks of the young man of today and his courting methods, she says, naively, but firmly, and with conviction in response to the question as to comparison of the young men of today and father's day:

"I think the young men of today are every bit as fine as those of my father's day. In fact, I prefer them."

TODAY

about ready to strike a blow for revenge.

Germany fears and believes that France has determined upon the absolute destruction of Germany, to insure French safety.

Italy fears the dominating power of France and forms alliances with Spain and Russia.

Greece fears Italy—having had a good lesson and severe humiliation in the Corfu matter, and implores Venizelos to return to power and do the thinking of which the Greek King is incapable.

AND THIS country is asked to join a World Court, submitting questions affecting American interests to European judges that would have this and nothing else in common. All would be prejudiced against America, and would agree that we shirked our duty in the war that they started, and all, enthusiastically, would decide against the United States in any financial matter, with touching unanimity.

DOES MR. COOLIDGE favor that kind of court? Thats the kind we're offered.

Lasker, retired from the Shipping Board, which, after all, was "not a business," returned to his advertising and today arrives in San Francisco. Publishers take notice.

LASKER should persuade the entire Pacific Coast, from San Diego to Seattle, to do combination advertising in the East and South.

Advertise the finest climates, and biggest trees, scattered all along the biggest ocean. People of the East, living between a palm leaf and a fur overcoat, know nothing of that great Pacific coast, where you can get anything you want, including weather, by asking for it.

LASKER cares no more for a new five million dollar "account" than a farmer does about a yoke of oxen. But he should try this, on a patriotic basis. He'd find it a more grateful and profitable job than his Shipping Board job.

THE "BEER RUNNERS" of Chicago have taken to shooting each other to a degree that the police consider unethical. One, Joe Stoltis, has "come clean," he has squealed. For a glimpse of crime, under prohibition, you should read his talk with the police. For instance: "They've got me marked and I know it. They'll bump me off, the first chance. That's why I'm coming through for you.

"They've got the death mark on me and I've got a wife and four kids.

"Who killed O'Donnell's men, George Meeghan and 'Spec' Rucker? Not me. I have the dope that strangers got 'em. They say the O'Donnells hired Meeghan and Bucher to do something rough."

The O'Donnells are hated by the legitimate beer runners because they started out as hijackers, robbing the legitimate ranners. Stevenson would have been interested in that confession.

Three policemen are involved in the beer-running murders, which makes it complete.

DIGGING a ditch 55 miles long would make a seaport of Chicago. From the ocean to Montreal is a channel 1,000 miles long, 30 feet deep, in the Saint Lawrence. There is a good channel, not less than 20 feet deep, able to float 80 per cent. of the world's seagoing ships, all the way from the ocean to Chicago except the Welland Canal, 25 miles long, and around the Sioux rapids, 33 miles.

W. L. Harding, of Iowa, says to Chicago men: "You ought to dig that ditch."

HE'S right. The second biggest city in America, with its 58 miles of being an ocean port, ought to dig out the 55 miles.

All opposition from New York or other Eastern cities, or railroads, is bad citizenship and foolish as well. What helps any part of this country helps all the rest.

THE digging job suggested is a small one, for Chicago energy. But all Lake cities, and the Federal government as well, should combine on the job.

Eastward through the Saint Lawrence to the Atlantic, southward via the Mississippi Valley to the Gulf, ocean ships should sail from the Great Lakes.

France and Germany, supposed to be crippled by a great war, cheerfully undertake works of that magnitude. What is the matter with this country? We find ten billions to lend in Europe—on the worst security—and not one billion for home improvements that should pay for themselves in half a generation.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take Jad Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may get fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

SOAKS RIGHT IN AND LIMBERS UP STIFF JOINTS

Pharmacists call it "Joint-Ease" because it's for Swollen, Sore, Painful, Creaky Joints Only

It took a good many years to get together a combination of pain subduing and swelling reducing agents declared to be the one remedy that almost instantly penetrates through skin and flesh and starts right in to make swollen, inflamed, creaky, pain-racked joints as good as new.

They call this new and wonderful preparation "Joint-Ease" because the medical man who turned the trick, worked for years to perfect some low-priced remedy that would really benefit the millions of people who have one or more joints that need helpful attention.

So "Joint-Ease" is prepared only for people who have a swollen, painful, creaky, distorted or stiff joint, whether it be in knee, elbow, shoulder, ankle, neck or finger and whether it be caused by rheumatism or something else.

Of course, it can't help but quickly put an end to such superficial ailments as lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, aching muscles, stitch in the side, crick in the neck or sore feet because of its penetrating action, but what it is really recommended for is joint ailments of any nature whatever.

Ask for a tube of "Joint-Ease." You can use it several times in one evening for quick results, because it goes right through the skin with only a few seconds rubbing. It surely is a swift penetrator and when it gets under the skin, it starts right in to clean up all joint trouble.

All druggists dispense it daily for about 60 cents a tube, as do first class druggists everywhere.

NURSE VOWS TO KEEP EX-MATE FROM ALTAR

His angry divorced wife threatens to shatter the romance of Walter Ray, Wright, confectioner, and Bertha Wormwood, bank stenographer, which was formed in Waltham and has reached the stage of marriage intentions in Providence.

Wright cannot remarry in Massachusetts for another year, having been divorced about twelve months ago for cruel and abusive treatment. Hence the trip to Providence.

EX-WIFE CONFIDENT.

Wright, who is twenty-eight years old, and the Waltham National Bank typist, who is twenty-one, are free to wed in Rhode Island as long as they do not live together as man and wife in Massachusetts, it would appear.

Mrs. Gertrude Wright, who is twenty-six years old and a nurse with a home at No. 272 Crescent street, Waltham, will not reveal why she is so confident of checkmating her former spouse and the girl she no longer claims as a friend.

She was not at all hesitant, however, in commenting on the romance of her erstwhile friend who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Wormwood of No. 32 Floyd street.

"Wright and I were married seven years ago at his Boston home," the ex-wife declared. "We lived happily until he got a job in the bank. It was there that he met Miss Wormwood. She was often a guest in our home."

TYPIST SILENT.

Mrs. Wright then made it plain that Miss Wormwood was no longer to be classed as her friend.

The stenographer, herself, when asked how she regarded the prospect of being a bride anywhere but in Massachusetts, told a reporter that she was "none of your business."

Wright's retort to the same question was: that dire results awaited the reporter if his investigation was continued.

WIDOW, 65, TO WED, CALLS IT LOVE MATCH

"A little bit o' love won't hurt you, regardless of your age."

"A man—or woman, for that matter, is as young as his or her spirit, and no older."

"A little home for two is still a fine thing. That's what we want. Just a home for two."

These bits o' wisdom fell from the lips of Mrs. Caroline E. Haley, a widow, of No. 953 Albany street, Roxbury, after she had filed intentions to wed for the third time.

Mrs. Haley is sixty-five years old, a housekeeper, and as she says, is still "as young as her spirit." Which means she is still quite spry and "still able to putter around a bit."

She has a married daughter forty-six years old.

Mrs. Haley's third mate is to be Herman Erhardt, a widower of No. 49 Centre street, Quincy. He is a [illegible].

He's seventy-five, ten years her senior, but to quote her own words —"still chipper and still able to do a day's work and still able to earn a day's pay."

Mrs. Haley's former husbands are both dead. Her husband-to-be also lost two wives by death.

THOUGHT AIRSHIP CARRIED COOLIDGE

Northampton, Dec. 5.—An army airship, flying low and at tremendous speed over this city, brought the rumor that President and Mrs. Coolidge had come by air from Washington to vote at the annual election in their home town. Hundreds gathered in Main street and in front of the polling place at Memorial Hall to catch the first glimpse of Northampton's most distinguish citizens, who have not been here since the President took the oath of office.

TO RECORD COOLIDGE'S RADIO SPEECH ON A PIANO WIRE

Washington, Dec. 5.—Besides having his message to Congress broadcast to the four corners of the United States, President Coolidge may get back a permanent record of it registered on a long string of piano wire.

Backers of the device announced today that they had perfected means of recording radio messages, and that they expected to demonstrate it fully on the occasion of the President's address.

The system is said to be a development of a principle discovered sixteen years ago by Valdemar Pulsen, who found that a steel wire can be magnetized in spots, much as a phonograph record is indented. The wire can be run through a machine which reproduces whatever is recorded.

BASEBALL SPECTATOR, HIT BY BOTTLE, DEMANDS $10,000

Pittsburgh, Dec. 5.—Joseph Gordon has entered suit against the Pittsburgh Athletic Club for $10,000. It became known here today. Gordon claims that while seated in the grandstand at Forbes Field during a baseball game between the Pittsburgh and New York Nationals in July, 1922, he was struck on the head by a pop bottle, thrown from the upper tier.

She Can't Cook but Friend Husband Will Teach Her

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE WRAGG

Sixteen-year-old Dorothy Rogers Wragg starts her married life in a little Everett apartment, but she can't cook. However, her youthful husband, George, makes a mean skillet se for the present he will preside over the ranse. Dorothy had the alternative in court of chosing between her newly-acquired husband and her mother and she decided to stock to George. She hopes for the best.

How do you get your honeymoon breakfast if you don't know how to cook?

Why let George do it, of course. Pretty sixteen-year-old Dorothy Rogers decided to live with her husband, George Wragg, after the court ordered that she choose between her husband and her mother. Sunday they took an apartment at No. 177 Woodlawn street, Everett, and moved in enough furniture so that they were able to have breakfast in their love nest this morning.

But George can.

So they had good old American bacon and eggs, and it tasted great.

"I may not know how to cook but George is going to help me market and his mother and sister will teach me how to cook."

Dorothy already knows how to boil water and drop eggs.

The little home is to be furnished and decorated in Dorothy's taste. Her ideas on the subject are very charming.

"We're going to have a pretty home when it's finished."

She hasn't heard from her mother but she expects to see her soon. "I'm sure mother will visit us here when this blows over. I am the only girl and it made her feel very badly to have me marry and leave her."

JILTED MARQUIS SUES AMERICAN WIDOW

Eloping Wife, Caught on Liner, Back Home

MARQUIS DEMANDS BALM

Jilted by Wealthy American Widow, He Sues for 500,000 Francs

Paris, Dec. 5.—The nobility of France have reformed.

In points of honor they have forsaken the sword for the cash register. As witness:

Marquis de Pontevez, French cavalry captain, loved Mrs. Medick F. Thompson, New York and Newport society leader, with $2,000,000 cash at her command. They became engaged.

The war came and the gallant marquis went to battle. He saw five years' service with the French, and was several times decorated. Preparing to return to his sweetheart he was horrified to learn she had turned to another.

"Have changed my mind," she wired; "will not marry you. Am going to wed Count de Beaurespaire."

She did so, becoming a countess.

In the old days the count would have been challenged to a duel by the disappointed marquis. Instead the latter gallant has entered suit in French courts for 500,000 francs damage alleging that his former fiance ruined him with extravagant gifts of jewelry, valuable house and heirlooms.

The countess's American husband was Frederick Thompson. He was the grandson of the founder of the Chase National Bank, New York city. He died here in 1913. His estate totalled more than $7,600,000. He left $2,000,000 in trust to his widow.

Mrs. Thompson is a benefactor of Williams College. The Thompson Memorial Chapel there was given by Mrs. Thompson in memory of her husband. It cost half a million dollars.

Mrs. Thompson is a Williams alumni her mansion on Madison Avenue, between Fortieth and Forty first street, for a clubhouse in 1918.

BIRTH CONTROL CLINIC RUNNING IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 5.—The announcement that a birth control clinic has been operating successfully on Fifth avenue since last January was made at the luncheon today of the American Birth Control League.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, with a satisfied smile of achievement, told of the accomplishment of her cherished dream, for which she once spent thirty days in jail. In the eleven months of its existence the graduate physician of the clinic has had 400 women under observation and care and has supplied them with birth control information and advice.

"There are two classes for which we care," Mrs. Sanger stated, "those who are suffering from transmissible diseases, such as insanity, epilepsy and feeble-mindedness, and women who are affected with tuberculosis, heart or kidney disease or have deformities. Most of the women, of course, are poor, very poor."

TRIES FOR ALTITUDE RECORD, USING NEW SUPER-CHARGER

Washington, Dec. 5.—Lieutenant John A. Macready, army air service, will attempt on the first day practicable, it was announced today at the War Department, to establish a new altitude record by use of an improved super-charger which will permit the engine of his plane to function efficiently at extreme heights.

The new mechanism was invented by Dr. S. A. Moss, and is an improvement over the equipment used by Macready in 1921 when he established a world's record for altitude of 34,509 feet, which stood until October of this year when Sadi Lecointe, a French flier, reached 35,554 feet.

"SAILS TO SEA TO DIE"; IS FOUND ASLEEP IN BOAT

New York, Dec. 5.—George Horman put out to sea in search of death, but wearied of his task and fell asleep in the bottom of his motor-sail boat.

Coast guards found the craft wrecked in the sand off Rockaway Point and in it the thirty-year-old "hot dog" vendor and adventurer was slumbering. When he had satisfied a ravenous appetite, he frankly admitted he was glad his proposed voyage into the great unknown had come to a commonplace end.

He had left a note saying he was going to sea to die.

RESCUERS BALK MAID FROM 2D STORY LEAP AT FIRE

Worcester, Dec. 5.—Trapped by the flames and about to jump out a window, Andrea Carlson, a maid employed by Isaac Grodberg, was rescued from a second floor room at No. 226 Highland street by Patrolman Carl I. Sundreen and Warren E. Mallette of No. 167 Russell street. The fire started on the back piazza, worked up to the roof and caused damage of $10,000. Fireman Arthur N. Bellows of Chemical No. 1 was cut about the face by flying glass, and Arthur Allen, physical director at the exclusive Bancroft School, was cut on the right hand when he smashed the glass in the fire alarm box.

MOTHER OF 9 RULES HAMLET NEAR HEART OF PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Julia M. Fife, mother of nine children, a widow, today rules the hamlet of Seldom Seen, by virtue of 19 votes to the 18 in a recent election.

Seldom Seen, though scarcely more than a mile from the city's business section, is an inaccessible village of sixteen homes perched on the edge of a precipitous bluff.

Seldom Seen was once the scene of cock fights and boasted of several gambling resorts.

"Them are gone now," says Constable Fife, and I don't expect the element that supported them to return. But if they do——"

He displayed a threatening bare arm and a clinched fist, hardened by unremitting daily manual toil.

GLOVES AND SILK STOCKINGS FOR BEST GIRL $10 SETBACK

That's where the styles get us—gloves and sox must match.

This is not a mere "set" of gloves, as you might think, including, in a neat box, for about six bucks, two or three pairs.

It means a pair of novelty gloves say in suede or glace, matched up with a pair of hose especially stocked in the same shade and motifs as the back of the gloves.

The "sets" are getting a big play in the big Christmas windows and the ladies do not seem a bit cross about the cute idea.

Hunters Bag Few Deer

Worcester, Dec. 5.—It was another lean day for Worcester county deer hunters, the second of the six days of the open season. Only thirteen kills were made. The total for two days is forty-three.

SHOW GIRL WINS LOVE SUITS

Thorne Settles $200,000 Case With Mary Lygo, Former Follies Star

Chicago, Dec. 5.—The $100,000 breach of promise suit of Mary Lygo, former Follies girl, against Gordon C. Thorne, wealthy clubman, and one for a similar amount against Mrs. Catharine Thorne Camp, Thorne's mother and divorced wife of William ("Billy") Camp, were settled out of court as the suit against Thorne was ready to go to trial.

One report was that the settlement was for $75,000. Thorne himself said that he paid Miss Lygo $5,000, of which $3,000 was to drop the breach of promise suit and $2,000 to dismiss the action against his mother.

He declared this was cheaper than attorneys' fee. Charles Erbstein, attorney for Miss Lygo, denied this, but refused to reveal the terms.

As Miss Lygo left the courtroom today she and Thorne met face to face. He said:

"Hello, Mary, it's all over, isn't it?"

She replied as she passed on:

"Yes, and I'm glad."

AUTO TURNS TURTLE, THREE ESCAPE DEATH

One man is in a serious condition in J. B. Thomas Hospital, and two others had narrow escapes from death in Peabody when the machine in which they were riding turned turtle, after crashing into a tree and phone pole to avoid striking a truck.

John Chambers, No. 4 Barr street, Salem, is on the danger list in the Thomas Hospital, with multiple injuries. John Arnoldy of Salem, driver of the car, and another man escaped unscathed.

The three men are managers of the Mayoralty campaign of Attorney Michael Sullivan of Salem.

POLITICAL DEBATE AT SOMERVILLE

Interest in Somerville mayoralty campaign is centered in the debate this evening in Somerville High School Auditorium, when John J. Murphy, a veteran of the World War, and Democratic nominee for Mayor will debate with Mayor John N. Webster, Republican nominee for re-election. Murphy challenged Mayor Webster to a debate on the latter's administration of city affairs during the past two years and the Mayor immediately accepted.

Now She's Tuning Out

HAYES AND HIS "WIDOW"

Having revealed that the radio deprived her of his aid and companionship, Mrs. Hayes now applies for divorce.

Mrs. Helen M. Hayes, the "Radio Widow" tuned in on the divorce court today and with a perfect connection now expects to gain a divorce from radio fan husband, Arthur E. Hayes.

He is the dark-haired little electrician janitor at the Harvard Medical School who recently startled folks by asking the courts to have Lawton Pierce, ex-sailor and star boarder at the Hayes' domicile given the air.

Pierce is a cousin of Mrs. Hayes. Hayes asked that the youth be prevented from interfering with his marital bliss.

The bliss never existed, according to Mrs. Hayes, who replied by starting divorce proceedings, on the grounds that she had been "widowed" when Hayes gave all his affection and time to radio instead of to her.

Mrs. Hayes seeks suitable support and a temporary hearing at which alimony can be arranged. She also asked her husband's property—presumably his radio outfit—be attached in the sum of $500.

The Hayes are still living under the same roof at No. 45 Birch street, Roslindale. They were married in 1912 following a motorcycle romance.

CARDINAL WANTS PIUS X MADE SAINT

Rome, Dec. 5.—Cardinal William O'Connell, of Boston, sent a petition to the Holy Father for beatification of Pius X.

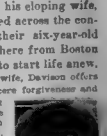
In his letter, Cardinal O'Connell asserts that the whole American Catholic clergy and all members of Catholic churches are in favor of beatification.

HUSBAND BLAMES 'GOSSIP'

Made Her Suspicious of Him and Caused Her to "Listen to Deceiver"

Holderness, N. H., Dec. 5.—Guy S. Davison, wealthy automobile dealer, his eloping wife, whom he traced across the continent, and their six-year-old son returned here from Boston by motor car to start life anew.

To his erring wife, Davison offers nothing but sincere forgiveness and the greatest sympathy. She was the victim of false friends, who deceived her as to his actions and whose poison tongues sowed the seed of suspicion in her mind, he declares.



Mrs. Davison.

As for L. Everett Marden, Davison's former salesman, who betrayed his trust and tried to steal his wife, Davison is content to let him contend with his present difficulties. For Marden's alleged theft of his employer's automobile, Davison declares, he may reckon with him in the future.

Marden, Davison declared, is now being held by the authorities at Los Angeles for alleged liquor smuggling. In Marden's trunk when he landed with Mrs. Davison at Los Angeles, the authorities found a quantity of liquor, which he said to have brought from Cuba, Davison said.

VICTIM OF FALSE FRIENDS

With the Davisons when they arrived here was Mrs. Davison's mother, who has been active in the attempt to bring her eloping daughter back for the sake of the latter's little son.

In condoning the wrong of his wife, Davison refused to state what it was that he claims had caused her to turn against him.

"I forgive my wife and do not blame her for her actions. She was the victim of false friends, who represented me to her in such a light that she was persuaded to leave me."

"Let him do all the talking," she said. "Whatever he says is all right for me."

TRACED TO COAST.

At the time Mrs. Davison and Marden eloped, taking with them two automobiles owned by Davison, the latter had offered a reward of $5000 or "anything within reason" for information as to the whereabouts of the couple.

He traced the pair at first to New York, where he learned that they had taken a boat for California. When the boat docked at Los Angeles, Davison was there with detectives to receive the couple. Marden was arrested by Los Angeles police and Mrs. Davison accompanied her husband across the continent back to their home here.

BENEFIT FRIDAY FOR SICK ACTRESS

A long list of talented artists have cheerfully volunteered their services to appear at the testimonial to be tendered to Ruth Fielding, Friday evening, at the Larchwood Bungalow in Cambridge. The committee in charge, headed by Mrs. Mary J. Cavanagh and Mrs. Alice Sullivan, has worked untiringly for several weeks with the result that a capacity crowd is expected to be present as a mark of tribute to Miss Fielding, who, through overwork on the stage, has suffered severe illness that has confined her to her home for nearly two years.

BOY AGAIN TRIES SUICIDE OVER BRIDE OF 15

The fiery temperament of seventeen-year-old Frank Altomare of No. 33 Temple street won and lost him his fifteen-year-old girl-wife, and has caused him to make two unsuccessful attempts at suicide since she left him, all within the past few months.

Altomare's latest attempt at suicide was frustrated by his brother Salvatore, who smelled gas, traced it to Frank's room and found Frank unconscious.

The boy was rushed to the Relief Hospital. He will recover.

He failed in a similar attempt at suicide two weeks ago. A note found in his room said:

"I am tired of this life. I cannot forget Camilla. I have tried but I cannot get her out of my mind.

Several months ago Frank and Camilla eloped to Providence, where they were married. Camilla will be fifteen next month. For awhile all went well. Camilla was working and making good money.

Suddenly Frank tired of working, and things went from bad to worse. Camilla refused to live with him unless he worked and complained to the police that he beat her. She finally left him, went to live with her sister, and began divorce proceedings.

Assisted by his twin brother, Edward, Frank is alleged to have tried to kidnap her. When she put up a fight they beat her. This is the story she told police when she had them arrested. Frank was found not guilty and dismissed while Edward was found guilty and put on probation.

Frank claims he is the victim of too much mother-in-law.

COOLIDGE MOURNS U. S. NEGRO OFFICIAL

Hopkinsville, Ky., Dec. 5.—Wreaths from President Coolidge, Senator Medill McCormick and Secretary of Labor Davis were among those placed on the grave of F. H. Brown, negro, a commissioner of conciliating in the department of labor. Brown was the highest paid negro in the history of the federal government with a salary of $5,500.

A letter to Brown's widow from the President said: "I wish you to know of my conviction that the country and the public service have sustained a very real loss in your husband's death."

It's a boy. Nine and one-half pounds.

Born the same hour and date as that of Mayor Curley's son.

Mrs. Wilinsky and baby are doing very nicely, thank you, at the Philips House, attached to the Massachusetts General Hospital. It was cesarian birth.

COOLIDGE WILL REVEAL 1924 ATTITUDE

Washington, Dec. 5.—President Coolidge will acknowledge the action of the South Dakota Republican proposal convention in granting him the preference for the Presidential primary, and will send a communication to Republican leaders of that State, which may go a long way toward indicating his attitude toward 1924.

The intention of Mr. Coolidge to recognize publicly the South Dakota convention's endorsement was made known at the White House, where officials made no attempt to discuss their satisfaction in the majority given the President over Senator Hiram W. Johnson.

RADIO FADING NOW TRACED TO CODE

Sudden fading of a distant program is now believed to be due to interference by code stations on or near the line that would connect your receiving set with the broadcasting station

Actual tests have shown that a distant station will suddenly fade when no actual code signals are apparent at the receiver But on finishing around, the code station comes the fade can often be traced

So that in addition to the direct interference by stations powerful enough to blot out their dots and dashes through the music you have been enjoying, then is, to all probability the annoying fading to blame on the code stations that are broadcast waves.

SIGN THE PETITION.

Here is another reason why you should sign the American's petition to President Coolidge

The President has already promised to direct the attention of Congress to the need of laws properly regulating interference.

If the petition shows a strong enough sentiment he will be able, by concentrating this show of public opinion, to induce the commercial stations voluntarily to adopt frequencies less likely to wreck broadcasting

Amateurs have modernized their equipment till now it is a matter of pride for the dyed in the wool "ham" to have graduated from the clumsy spark transmitter Voluntarily the "ham" has adopted silent hours in order to lessen even the slight remaining possibility of disrupting the enjoyment of the great army of broadcast listeners—the "D. C. L's" he calls them

EASIER FOR THEM.

If the amateur can regulate himself and his fellows, its honld be much easier for the commercial station to follow suit. But, in spite of all the pleas for relief, how many commercial stations have announced that they had taken the hint and changed transmitters to a high band of frequencies?

Sign the American petition When you are at the Radio Show today, stop at the American booth, get a few of the petition blanks and sign up your friends. When the blanks are filled mail them to us

MISS SWANSON GIVES APACHE FILM DANCE

ADMIRERS of Gloria Swanson will be interested to know that as a part of her role in her latest film "The Humming Bird," this star does an apache dance which is "vengeful, fierce and wild," according to Rosalie Coccia, who introduces the dance in this country and will dance with Miss Swanson in the new Paramount production. The beautiful screen celebrity has been absent from the Long Island studio for over a month, due to eye trouble, caused by the glaring lights.

Petition to President

TO the Honorable Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States:

We, the undersigned radio broadcast listeners, respectfully call your attention to the serious interference to radio reception which is caused by remediable factors. We petition you to take action to have this interference stopped.

FLINT CAR PUT THROUGH PACES ON 3 WHEELS

Motorists and others on Commonwealth avenue, near St. Mary's street, witnessed a most unusual sight when a Flint touring car was driven up the avenue with one front wheel removed. This was the first time, so far as is known, that any four-wheeled motor car has been driven in Boston on three wheels

The automobile editor of this paper, with Weld McKone, of the Connell, McKone Company, and a driver, took quite a ride in this novel manner. To say that the car attracted attention is putting it mildly. Traffic was blocked, and many motorists leaned so far out of their cars to see this extraordinary sight, that general traffic was moving at a slow pace in order that all could see this strange looking car.

The car was even driven with two on the front seat and a third passenger on the same side of the tonneau as that which was minus the front wheel. The tubular backbone construction of the Durant makes the frame rigid enough to do this stunt and seems to suit it.

Altogether the car traveling in this manner was probably the most novel automobile stunt that has been witnessed in this city.

RADIO SHOW IS LESSON FOR SCOFFERS

A large Rand McNally radio map giving all the information needed by the radio listener is being given to visitors at the Boston American booth at the Radio show with a two months' subscription to the American.

The map gives the location of every broadcasting station in the United States and Canada, the location of all high-powered commercial stations, extracts from the Federal act for the regulation of radio broadcasting, and much other important information.

Those scoffers who have held that the radio is but a passing fancy with the American public should take advantage of the third annual radio exposition at Horticultural hall to get the "low down" on radio and its relation to the everyday life of Mr and Mrs Radio Fan.

The city editor sent a novice to "cover" the second day of the exposition All the real radio bugs in the office were too busy to write anything about the show. The novice started for the hall a scoffer. He returned a convert from numerous bites inflicted by the radio bug.

Radio knows no sex. It knows no age. It knows no station in life.

Being a novice, the reporter was more interested in the fact that a big German police dog seemed to take enjoyment from the head sets than he was in the vast crowd that struggled about the Boston American booth to learn what the expert had to say about the Superneutrodyne.

There was a radio set made from a once important whiskey bottle. The shell of a turtle had been converted into another novelty We learned that most of the real bugs hovered a while at the booth where H E Bowditch was demonstrating the use of batteries in radio Mr Bowditch is representing the National Carbone company.

Joan Shepard, 3rd, was another prominent bug in attendance He is one of New England's radio pioneers Monsignor Splaine rector of St. Joseph's church, Roxbury, was another in evidence. There was also a big crowd about the booth where they were giving out free chance for a radio set.

The second day's crowd broke the record of the first day and if the present rate continues, this year's show will be the most successful in history.

BRISBANE ASKS WOMEN TO USE THEIR VOTES

Chicago, Dec. 5 (By Universal Service).—Arthur Brisbane, the famous editor, speaking before the Woman's Aid in Kimball Hall, gentle rebuked women voters for failing to take full advantage of their power to control government and select public servants.

He reminded them that in the days of kings women ruled the kings, and that in these days of the ballot systematic organization would give them the whip-hand in the naming of candidates.

Woman voters in Chicago, he said, had demonstrated their strength in the election of Mary Bartelme to the bench against the advice of the Bar Association. In the East, however, Mr. Brisbane declared, women neglected great opportunities.

Practical politicians recognize the danger of feminine opposition, he maintained, pointing to the attitude of district captains

"In the old days," said Mr. Brisbane, "a captain in charge of his ward was to keep the boys in good humor by giving them all the beer and whiskey they wanted. Now when a leader sees his henchman entertaining a voter, he says:

"You see that he gets home sober I don't want his old woman and the two girls working against us."

Discussing birth control, Mr Brisbane said:

"I'm children—I have five myself and a good family Trouble is for farm Fifteen is a complete library on birth control.

"Theodore's mother had nineteen children. If she had stopped at eighteen there wouldn't have been any Theodore—because he was the nineteenth."

FIRST ARTICLE ON HOW TO BUILD THE BABY SUPERNEUTRODYNE

ADAPTABLE TO OTHER SETS

Wiring Diagram and List of Materials Needed for Complete Unit

This is first of a new series by the inventor of this remarkable circuit already protected by the patent laws of the United States. The series starts with the heart of the set, the radio frequency unit, arranged to be used with your present detector or detector-2-stage radio outfit. Others in the series include super and detector in one unit to use with ordinary batt amplifiers, the super, detector and 2-stage-audio unit of the new, improved design, and the loop-super-two-stage-audio set. Watch for them. The present article describes the wiring diagram and the material needed (Editor).

By M. A. SIMMONS,
Inventor of the Supernetrodyne.

Here is the Baby Super.

It's exactly like its big brother, the Supernetrodyne, that has been establishing DX records—DX records without a equal.

The Baby Super was designed in answer to a great flock of letters all demanding to know, forthwith, how a single old style detector, fourth or fifth audio and radio frequency amplifying tube and control.

We have selected this unit to start the new Super series, which has been promised you, because of the letters asking for such a unit and designed it for the simplest.

This interests you if you already have a detector set, or a detector with audio amplifications. It interests you if you wish to start at the beginning and build a whole Supernetrodyne, in two or three units. It interests you if you have commenced the Big Brother Super, because it will help you check your wiring and smooth out some of the troubles that occasion such a flock of letters that comes every mail.

It is now possible to buy the radio frequency transformers all wound and coupled, and in some stores mounted on the condensers. We would like to tell you right here what stores carry them, but these birds in the advertising department would kick, like Uncle Sis's Maud.

WIND THEM AT HOME.

If you prefer to wind them yourself and mount them and you missed the specifications in the original series, you can. The Baby Super articles will contain the Radio Frequency Transformer dope; in fact, one whole installment will be devoted just to that particular stunt.

In either case, you need two of the-se wonder-worker Ranaformers for the Baby Super. "Ranaformer" or self made.

Next comes the two variable condensers. Just because it is necessary to pick on some particular brand of condenser, in order to give definite parts lists, we have in this time selected the Waltham. It should be .0002 microfarad capacity, or that separately approximately, and select some of those.

The woods are filled with condensers, but make sure you select those that are low loss, and to these just, easy to mount, easy to tune. You need two, just alike, without any vern or attachment because with your instrument you are mounting the transformers on the condensers a job for a machinist.

Here's another but:

If you select other than Waltham, you will have to spot the holes in the panel by which the condensers are fastened to the panel from the condenser itself, or from a paper template of the mounting holes. The panel which we will lay out for you tomorrow is spotted for Waltham condensers. But that variation ought not to be difficult.

ANOTHER CAUTION.

The same "but" applies to the tube socket. Any panel-mount socket will do. The specifications call for Federal, and the panel layout is spotted for Federal. You can mount other makes BUT don't start drilling that expensive bakelite panel till you have secured the sockets, condensers and the rheostat you intend to use.

You need two four inch dials with a mounting hole to take the shaft of your condensers. This will be a one-quarter inch hole, if Waltham condensers are used. And if Waltham, you need a twist drill, of about three-eighth to let the shaft through the panel with room enough to turn freely.

Most condensers are mounted by means of machine screws usually of the 6-32 and thread specified as 6 x 32. That is No. 8 screw stock, with 32 threads to the inch. These call for a No. 13 twist drill, to make the holes, insist on flathead, countersink screws, and get a countersink that will let them into the hold flush with the panel front.

This No. 13 twist drill will also cut the holes for the binding posts, some of which come with that same screw. And, by the way, you need eight binding posts, of the type you most prefer.

THE RHEOSTAT.

For the rheostat we picked the Federal No. 27. But you can make your own choice, only get one with about the same resistance. Get a good one that will turn freely and smoothly, without using the face of the panel for a bearing surface. The panel is spotted for Federal No. 27. If you get another kind, spot the fastening holes from the instrument itself. The 5/16-inch drill will cut the rheostat shaft hole, and for the Federal No. 27 a No. 24 twist drill will drill the bolt holes. These had should be countersunk, too.

By the way, the No. 28 drill is the size for 6x32 machine screws. If your favor-ite uses a 4x36 machine screw, a No. 31 twist drill will be the size needed.

Three lengths of busbar should be enough for the wiring, and of course you will need solder and a few tools like pincers, screw driver, drill, or bitstock small enough to hold the twist drills and a solder iron.

For a flux, in soldering, dissolve resin in denatured alcohol, about one part resin to three parts alcohol. Worn radio sets are spoiled in the making by acid flux, which seems to have an especial affinity for fixed condensers, than by errors in wiring. Use the resin-alcohol flux, and even if it runs all over, it will cause little or no damage.

BYPASS CONDENSERS.

You also need a bypass condenser of .01 capacity. By bolting together, one atop the other, two .005 mfd. Dubilier No. 691 fixed condensers, (that is in parallel), you will have the desired capacity. It is usually safer, too, to bolt these condensers together, with a 4x36 machine screw, long enough to allow use of an extra nut by which you clamp the wire leads.

A hot solder iron, held a second too long against a fixed condenser often ruins it for life. And Dubilier, the ruined condenser may load you a long hunt, trouble seeking. Leave the fancy soldering to the expert.

In soldering, always be sure your iron is hot, and that the parts to be soldered are hot, and use as little solder as you can and make the joint. And when cool wipe the wiring with a cloth dampened in alcohol, to finish the job shipshape, Bristol fashion.

AND THEN THE PANEL.

Last, and not least, is the panel. The dimensions are 7 by 21 and it may be either one-quarter inch thick, or, at less cost, 3-16. It may be any of the approved bakelite, or condensite materials, or of the hard rubber made for radio use. It might even be made of three-ply veneer, if well shellacked, although you probably would never be satisfied with a wooden panel.

Tomorrow we will print a panel layout, actual size, that you can cut out, lay on the panel and spot hole centers with a scriber right through the diagram, if you like to do it that way, instead of measuring it out yourself.

HIGH SCORING FOOTBALL TEAMS FALL OFF DURING 1923

CORNELL IN FIRST POSITION

New York Dec 5 (AP) The ave on a football scoring and the for 100 leading colleges representing all sections of the country reveal one of two things—either that defensive play has improved over 1922, or offensive play has become somewhat less effective.

The eleven of these 100 institutions participated in 814 games and piled up a grand total of 12,684 points. This would make the average per team for the season appear match 127 as compared with 124 of last year and would make the average per game 15.6 as compared with 15 of a year ago.

Further indications of the greater effectiveness of the defense or lesser effectiveness of the offense may be seen in the actual records of leading teams.

Last year California with a total of 398 points, was the high scoring team, and Cornell, with 330, was in second place. This year Gilmour Dobie's Italian—although having scored 100 less points than in 1922, led the country with a total of 320.

Ranking second to Cornell this year is West Virginia, with a point total of 296; University of Colorado is third with 280; Notre Dame, fourth, with 275; Holy Cross, fifth, with 270. Other colleges scoring more than 200 points include each Rutgers Team, Syracuse, Army, Colgate, Yale, Virginia Military, Maryland, University of Washington and Dartmouth.

The low-scoring, or better, no score record for the year in the list unadorned is held jointly by City College of New York, Villanova and Rhode Island State, none of which figured in 0 to 0 games with other elevens during the season.

University of Kansas boasts the best defensive record. Its goal line was not crossed during the year, and but 6 points, the result of two field goals, were registered against it. California, against which seven points were scored a touchdown and the point following touchdown, is second on the defensive list; Michigan, which yielded 12 points; Boston College, which yielded 14, and Syracuse, which yielded 19, follow in order.

BIG AMATEUR BOXING SHOW FOR DILBOYS

The followers of the amateur mittwielders will be treated to an all star carnival in K. of C. Hall, Somerville, tomorrow evening, when the Dilboy Post, V. F. Freddie Russo

Frankie Williams, the pride of Charlestown, has entered in the 160 pounds class, and with the possibility of he and Bart O'Neill, of Dorchester, clashing in the finals of this class, the supporters of both warriors will be on hand to aid their favorites with their loyal support.

The show will start promptly at 8:00 p. m., and arrangements have been made with the officials of the Boston Elevated to provide extra service before and after the bouts to assist those coming from out of town.

TWI LEAGUE ENTERTAINS AT B.A.A.

Optimism was the keynote of the Twilight Leaguers at their annual big Fall gathering at the B. A. A. The sunset baseball magnates expect a greater season next Summer than they enjoyed last, and they certainly enjoyed that.

President Hugh Davidson was in charge of affairs and made a big hit with the assemblage by permitting few speeches, and not too much of them. Eugene Moran was peculiarly tickled that the brand of baseball he starred in in Greater Boston.

The league which was inaugurated only two years ago, has become one of the strongest circuits outside organized ball, and has already a Paul Gorman lines up to the majors, bouts from all the big clubs now make regular stops at the Twi games, and the league is gradually bringing Boston ball players back into the limelight.

The big leaguers appreciate this sort of development, and the pastime was made a complete success when a letter from President Bobby Quinn of the Red Sox was read. President Bobby extolled the league, claimed that it didn't hurt his attendance in the least, and wished the boys all sorts of success.

Mayor Quinn of Cambridge, Walter Powers of the Chamber of Commerce, Dan Leahy of North Cambridge Fire Commissioner Coburn, Attorney James Fagum and Peter McLoughlin, the well known umpire, were the speakers. Charlie Donovan was the toastmaster. A good time was had by all.

BIG SQUAD ANSWERS CALL FOR B. U. ICE TEAM

Boston University has turned all its energy to hockey, determined that it will put on the ice one of the fastest sextets of puck chasers in the neighborhood. With four veterans, sixty candidates and an able coach, the Back Bay collegians should make good their promise of a fast team and a successful season.

"Brick" O'Hare, who in his student days at B. U. was one of the best all-around athletes of the Red and White, is coaching the team, and has had his men hard at work for the past week in preparation for the first game against St. F. T., Friday, at the Arena.

There is no shortage of candidates for the job, however, as O'Hare has Pete Jacobs and Art Blaisdell from Newton High; Joe Kolodny of Boston Latin; Bill Meighan, former Dorchester High guardsman, among others battling for the position.

George Morrison of Haverhill, Canada, is another strong contender for the place. His long experience on the ice makes him a likely candidate for the position.

O'HARE HAS PAIR OF VETERAN WINGS.

On the wings, Coach O'Hare has two veterans, Provost and Blaisdell. These two players made a fine showing last season and will in all probability start against Tech on Friday night.

Both players have the prep school experience in Canada, where schoolboys take to ice just like ducks take to water. With one year a collegiate work behind them, they ought to prove a big asset to B. U.

Thomas Aimer, veteran of last season, will play centre ice. There are plenty of candidates who would like to take his place, however, but so far, none have shown that they are better able to handle the stick.

Kontoff, another veteran, will play defense. Kontoff is a powerful man and played on the B. U. eleven all season.

Morrisson, a former Dalhousie hockey star, looks like the most probable choice for the other defense position. He knows the game well, and his experience gives him the edge on the many other candidates for the position.

FIVE GAMES ALREADY ARRANGED FOR TEAM.

This year marks the second season of B. U. on skates. The Back Bay students felt last year that they should be represented in hockey and due principally to the efforts of "Brick" O'Hare, the present coach, a team was organized.

The B. U. sextette made a good showing, particularly against Tech, and are confident that their second season on the ice will be marked by brilliant playing and not a few victories.

The following schedule has been arranged by Manager Levins. It is not complete, and B. U. hopes to add several other strong teams to the list:

December 7—M. I. T. at Boston Arena.

December 18—Harvard at Boston Arena.

December 28—Toronto at Boston Arena.

January 12—Cornell (place not yet fixed).

February 13—Yale at New Haven.

School Committee Takes No Risk in Haverhill

Saturday's game between Haverhill and Salem High schools is not an official school game, according to the resolution passed by the Haverhill school committee.

Although the game is on and the players of both schools will take part, the youngsters are doing so at their own risk. Any injuries received by the Haverhill grid players will be up to the boys. The proceeds of the game will go to the Haverhill Boys' Club.

ARLINGTON ELECTS CAPTAIN MONDAY

The election of captains for the football, cross country and field hockey at the Arlington High School will be held up until after the awarding of letters Monday morning.

TARAMASCHI IS AFTER MATCH WITH LEWIS

Angelo Taramaschi, the Italian wrestling champion, is out to prove to the public he is one wrestler who has a chance of defeating Champion Joe Lewis for the championship, and has proposed a match with the latter, game to a finish, with the endurance of a race horse and with scissors, speed and strength of a high order.

His feat of holding two automobiles has never before been duplicated by a wrestler, and the thousands who watched him do this remarkable stunt can readily realize why he can tear an opponent to pieces when he gets him at close quarters.

In his match tomorrow night he will have the hardest try of his career. Charlie Plaine, the Greek heavyweight, who has defeated almost everything in the West, will be the man to give him the acid test.

Plaine is a rough-house artist of the first school and comes to Boston with the express purpose of making the Italian sensation jump out of the ring. The match will be best two falls in three to a positive finish.

Intense interest is shown in the other half of the double star card in which Jack Adricht, the man with the thousand holds, stacks up against Pinky Gardner, phenomenal light heavyweight from Schenectady, N. Y.

There has never been a wrestler appear on a Boston mat that has more friends than Pinky. He is 100-percent American.

In addition to this, he is a real wrestler and has taken on weight until he tips the scales at 182 pounds. Albright will be going at top speed if he comes through this match with flying colors.

Dakota Jack Turner is again on the warpath and wants a return bout with Stanley Stasiak, the Mighty Polish Wrestler. He claims the big Pole took a mean advantage of him in their last bout and won by rushing him to the ropes after the two hour mark had been passed and he had the Pole beaten. He wants a return bout on most any terms as long as it is to a positive finish and with a winner's and a loser's end.

SEVEN VETS TO RETURN FOR JUMBOS

Seven football regulars will return next season to the Brown and Blue. Van Franch of Winchester will succeed "Woof" Tyler as captain of the Jumbos. French played the role of a captain when Tyler was injured and proved a capable leader. His long end runs were responsible for most of the Tufts scoring.

Nate Shaw

Jack Wilson, Nate Shaw, Moon Reid, George Perry, Joe Kennedy and Hal McDonald are the other veterans who are likely to start the 1924 season for the Medford eleven.

Moon Reid, Shaw and Wilson are the trio of linesmen who have one more season at Tufts. They deserve much credit for the success of the 1923 football campaign. Education expects many stars from the freshman team to fill the gaps left vacancies. McDonald, Harry Richmond, Al Schuster and Nick Carter, a quarter of subs, will also be relied upon to step into the open berths.

George Perry, former Andover star, will call signals. He will be flanked by Joe Kennedy and Vic French. Kennedy was injured in the Bates game and was unable to finish the season.

George Perry

Bud Wiser, freshman full-back, and a transfer from the University of Maine, will be one of the leading candidates for the open back field berth. Hal McDonald, a backfield sub, will probably alternate with Weiner at the fullback assignment.

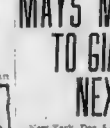
Faculty Manager Clarence Monson will assign some new coaches to assist Walter Cleary and Eddie Casey. Jimmy Leahey will return to the coaching ranks on the second team. Leahy will direct the scrubs, while Ollie Wescott will pilot the Brown and Blue yearlings.

Manager Vic Nelson announces the following 1924 schedule:

Sept. 29—Lowell Textile at Tufts Oval.
Oct. 6—Conn. Aggies at Tufts Oval.
Oct. 13—Rhode Island at Kingston.
Oct. 18—Middlebury at Tufts Oval.
Oct. 25—New Hampshire University at Durham.
Nov. 1—Wesleyan at Middletown.
Nov. 8—Bowdoin at Brunswick.
Nov. 15—Maine at Tufts Oval.
Nov. 22—Mass. Aggies at Tufts Oval.

MAYS MAY GO TO GIANTS NEXT

New York, Dec. 5.—The Giants can have Carl Mays, if the Yankees refuse to make right under, if they pay enough for him. The Yanks are willing to do business with their New York rivals on the same basis as with any other National League club, and there is no "gentlemen's agreement" which would prevent John McGraw from acquiring a player whom the American League team had discarded.



Carl Mays.

So declares Miller Huggins today and the mite manager went even further than that. He asserted that he would rather sell Mays to the Giants than keep him himself or give him his unconditional release.

The quaint person which Huggins places on the question was that if he could dispose of Carl to a minor league club and get waivers on it, he would make this deal rather than barter him to the Giants for vulgar cash.

If this rather surprising statement can be accepted at face value it means that John J. McGraw has to do only one thing to get Mays, that is, outbid every other National League club in cash offers for the underhand flinger.

FATHER OF BOXER SUED FOR $5,000

BROCKTON, Dec. 4.—Jack Burns, manager of Tony Julian, has filed a suit for $5,000 against Tony's father, Ralph Julian, for the alleged failure of Julian to live up to his contract with Burns. Tony Julian is not yet 21 which is why the suit is brought against his father.

After Julian had conquered Johnny Dundee he left Burns and took a New York manager, Tony Palermo. Julian was later suspended by the Massachusetts Boxing Commission.

HUGGINS BACK TO BUILD UP THE YANKS

New York, Dec. 5.—Miller Huggins has arrived here from Cincinnati and for the next few days will be the center of activities at headquarters of the Yankees. That is, if Huggins will be on hand when he arrives with baggage when he has documents with plans with Colonel Jake Ruppert. Huggins will spend a little time each day on the biography of his career in baseball.

It is understood that he will has leave of absence Take Way, the south, saw Tuesday star of the Pacific coast. The Yankees started out to corral May last Spring, but the deal fell through because of a difference of opinion. Huggins is ready to offer a substantial amount and several players in exchange for the Vernon Club star.

The Yanks manager will attend the big league conclave in Chicago next week and will make another effort to get Urban Shocker. He says he is ready to negotiate for the ace of the Yankee staff if he doesn't intend to wreck a championship team to get this pitching ace.

PAT McCARTHY ASKS ONE PUNCH AT JOHNNY WILSON'S JAW

EX-CHAMP DEMANDS $10,000

By JACK CONWAY

Johnny Wilson, former world's middleweight champion, says he wants to engage in one more bout before he clashes with Harry Greb in a return battle for the title at Madison Square Garden, New York, on January 18.

Wilson has conquered Georges Rehinson and Pal Reed in impressive style since his last engagement with Greb. We think that, if Wilson were in as good condition as he was for Robinson or Reed, when he last met Greb that he would still be middleweight boss.

We hope Wilson will take on a legitimate opponent before he steps into the ring with Greb again.

There is only one real rival for Wilson other than Greb. That is Pat McCarthy of Roxbury. For more than three years McCarthy has been demanding a chance at Wilson without success. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that Pat, when an inexperienced youngster, gave Wilson a furious engagement.

Since then McCarthy has developed into one of the leading boxers in the country. He has battered his way through the toughest kind of opposition. His amazing ability as a boxer backed by a heavy right hand punch, have enabled him to defeat even heavyweights like Bob Roper and Dan Dowd.

McCARTHY HAS SHOWN GREAT PUNCHING POWER.

In his last Boston bout McCarthy showed better than ever, defeating Hambone Kelly. Prior to that he knocked Pal Reed down four times in a single round and says he would have counted with a knock-out if he hadn't broken a small bone in his right hand.

A right hand puncher like McCarthy has a chance of knocking Wilson out. A right hand wallop is the only way to offset Johnny's [illegible] jaw threats.

Of course Wilson will be risking a great deal if he meets McCarthy. In the event he is defeated decisively he will see his bout with Greb, The former champion's manager, in order to protect his interests, is sincere in what he says and is not afraid to battle anyone in the middleweight division. However, I cannot help but believe he will decline a meeting with McCarthy no matter how tough the opposition may be.

WILSON WANTS $10,000 TO BATTLE McCARTHY

We realize the question of a purse may also be an obstacle to such a bout. Wilson received $5000 for his contest with Robinson and $4500 for his tussle with Reed. Naturally he would demand even more if he were to consent to clash with McCarthy.

Frank Marlow, Wilson's manager, has intimated he will sign Johnny for a Boston bout with McCarthy in the event his protege receives $10,000 as a guarantee and a privilege of 40 per cent. of the receipts. Several clubs are after the tussle and it is possible that one of them will get friendly enough with a move to grant Wilson his terms.

If a promoter is successful in bringing this pair of crazy hitters together, Boston and New England fans will witness one of those battles of the centuries the dear old press agents like to write about.

Hockey Notes

Saturday night's fray will be a cheerful spectacle to the regulars with Captain Jerry Geran, Frenchie Lachesi and others back on the ice for the first time this season. The opposing Maples the lineup will be new to Bostonians with the exception of Ace Williams. However, Dune Chisholm, Luigi Ronco, Fred Fromm, Ike Fisher, Lic Foster and Eddie Brady of the newcomers are clever men and are expected to win friends quickly.

George Owen, former Crimson athlete, will play against his Alma Mater Friday night at the arena as a member of the Boston Hockey Club. The Harvard aces get no more practice than the Hockey Club, but have not had the experience. The game should be hot and fast.

Boston University and M. I. T. title play Friday night. There is little doubt that this part of the double-header will get search the Arena ice floor. Both schools have been hard at work for the past week, and with a natural rivalry existing between them the fans are due for a night of action.

With the exception of Jack Hutchinson and Art Langley, every member of the Boston Hockey Club is a former pupil of Ralph Winsor, the present Crimson coach, and that fact will add interest to Friday night's tilt.

Philadelphia, Dec. 5. — The controversy between William T. Tilden, 2d, National singles and doubles tennis champion, and Harold H. Tilden said that he would attend the meeting to "see that the matter is taken up" and that he intended to do "some of the threshing."

FRIEDMAN TOO CLEVER FOR TOMMY NEE

Abe Friedman of Boston managed to sock his way to a victory over Tommy Nee of South Boston in the feature bout of ten rounds staged at the Grand Opera House under the direction of the Armory A. A.

Abe Friedman

For the first half of the mill both Friedman and Nee were taking things easy gauging the ability of each other. The Peninsula district lad did his best work in this part of the battle, poking in sharp lefts and rights.

Friedman did his best work in close and time and again rushed Nee to the ropes with stiff body blows. Abe got his start in the ninth by landing a few solid [illegible] ops. Nee's clinching saved him.

Eddie Mack's entry showed his superior knowledge of the fighting game throughout. Abe has taken a new lease of life lately.

The semi-final bout was quite some racket between Eddie Record of Nashua, N. H., and Whitey Al-[illegible]en of Hyde Park. The former won at the end of ten torrid rounds packed full of action.

The second bout between Charlie Donovan and Buff Ives was stopped in the fifth with the former a winner. The opening battle went to Jim Manning.

Jack Conway, world's champion picker, gave the boys the dope two-fifty four hours in advance.

TECH SEXTET READY FOR BIG YEAR

Massachusetts Institute of Technology has brilliant prospects for a successful hockey season. Never before has interest in the pastime been more pronounced across the Charles.

Four veteran puck chasers, under the leadership of Captain Manner, form the nucleus of a septet that Tech has good reasons to believe will be one of the best.

Among the thirty-five candidates for positions are many players of prep school fame, while a number of Coach Al Blacklock's proven men will be drilled to fill in any position vacant.

Mission and Pease are two veteran wingmen with whom Tech will depend a great deal in the forward lines. Both are fast and play a dazzling offensive game.

Dalton, center ice, is also a veteran, and showed in practice, the same class and speed that marked his playing last season.

Tech will open its season on Friday night at the Arena against Boston University. The Engineers have confident of defeating the Terriers but believe that they will have to fight to do so.

Tech is bending every effort to put itself in its best form for the Canadian trip during the Christmas holidays. While in Canada, the Engineers will play five games, the opponents to be announced later.

At the Arena, Tech will cross sticks with Boston College and Harvard and will also play Dartmouth, Yale, Cornell and West Point.

ENGLISH CHAMP AND SARAZEN TO PLAY

By THOMAS CUMMISKEY

New York, Dec. 5.—A 72-hole golfing battle between Arthur Havers, the British open champion, and Gene Sarazen, the American professional titleholder, will be waged in January in California. The match really amounts to the world's professional championship, though it is unofficial.

Agreements have been signed for the affair, and it will be held in January, with the first 36 holes at San Francisco and the second 36 holes at Los Angeles. The two champions have never met in match play competition, and have agreed not to appear in a single match prior to their meeting in California.

It was originally intended to hold the match in the East in November, with the Engineers' Club on Long Island and the Columbia Club in Washington as the scene, but Havers' father died on the eve of the sailing date from England.

BOB HARLOW TO PROMOTE MATCH.

The match in California will be promoted by Robert E. Harlow, well known in golfing circles, and will be for a rich purse. Havers will arrive in this country on Dec. 18, with James Ockenden, British professional, who will be his partner in a series of four ball exhibitions being arranged by T. W. Niblett, his American manager.

After attending much note by winning the North of England championship in 1921 and 1922, Havers arose to the heights by gaining the British open crown at Troon this year, beating Walter Hagen, who won the event last year, by one stroke. He also won the Glen Eagles tourney, another famous event abroad.

Sarazen shot to fame in 1923 by winning the American open championship at Skokie, heading Bobby Jones and Jack Black by a stroke. He also won the American professional title last year at Oakmont, and successfully defended the crown this year beating Hagen on the 37th hole in the final round of the P. G. A. tourney at Pelham.

BOBBY JONES TOOK SARAZEN'S TITLE

Although relinquishing the open title to Bobby Jones, an amateur, Sarazen clearly proved his right to be called the American professional king by topping the stars of the salaried clan.

Havers, of course, must be ranked as the professional champion of Great Britain by his victory in the open. It is to be noted also that he is the first Britisher to win the classic in three years. Jack Hutchison went over from this country to win the British open in 1921, and Hagen brought the trophy last year.

Geneva, Dec. 5.—The declaration of Secretary of State Hughes that the United States desires equal opportunities in the mandated districts will hold the attention of the League of Nations when the mandate problem comes up at the session of the League's Council, which begins its sessions in Paris December 10.

BROOKLINE GIRL IN PINEHURST GOLF

Pinehurst, N. C., Dec. 5.—Miss Ann Merrill of Brookline qualified in the first eight in the Carolina tournament for women, with a card of 104. Miss Louise Fordyce of Ohio, champion, won the medal with 93.

WILLIAMS SIX TO TRY LAKE PLACID

Williamstown, Dec. 5.—The Williams hockey team will spend a few days at Lake Placid, N. Y., during the coming Christmas vacation, the training trip being the first which has been planned for the Purple in this branch of sport.

The innovation was decided upon owing to the fact that lack of ice in the Berkshires has handicapped the development of the sextet this year. Present plans call for practice games with Yale and Dartmouth while at Lake Placid.

CRIMSON SI[illegible] TO BE PICKED BY WINSOR

With fifty promising candidates cutting up on the ice in the Arena daily, Harvard "digs in" for a match with the Boston Hockey Club Friday night with characteristic confidence.

There is plenty of good material and Coach Winsor should be able to develop a sextet capable of taking some of the best ice teams in the country in camp.

The squad has been divided into five teams.

Practice has been thus far restricted to sending the forwards down the ice against a series of defense players, this type of practice serving to develop team play.

At the Arena this afternoon Coach Winsor will select the team that will oppose the Boston Hockey Club.

'Mystery Stocks' Always Present Strong Appeal to Our Speculative Public

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Washington Dec 5—Business is run to get results. Politics—Government is run to get votes.

That is what the business men who have come to Washington all say. One of America's very largest industrial corporations, composed of men of great earnestness, found it extremely difficult to get heads of the various companies to look beyond their own company and do team-work for the good of the parent organization. Each man's chief—his own company.

The board of directors finally succeeded in getting the spirit of co-operation and joint team-work. The result was to show them how much better the corporation can be run when—

By and by I hope to record some intimate facts and impressions about different members of the Cabinet, the mist is as well as the Cl

HIDDEN FACTS PROVE A LURE TO MANY

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor.

Mystery stocks always present a strong appeal to our speculative public. Hidden facts prove a lure to immense numbers of men.

The president of Lackawanna Railroad declined to say anything about it, but there can be no doubt that Erie's decision to pay the $4 dividend on its first preferred stock, which was declared on Monday, was largely influenced by the fact that the Lackawanna directors were meeting in the same building on the same day.

Lackawanna has been paying $4 annually on its stock for many years. Erie has been paying only $2 annually on its first preferred stock. Lackawanna's earnings have been much larger than Erie's. Lackawanna's financial position is much stronger than Erie's. Lackawanna's credit is much better than Erie's.

Lackawanna's stock has been selling around 130 to 135. Erie's first preferred stock has been selling around 40 to 45

In YOUR Brain a Magneto Is at Work

Do You Know What Work the Magneto Does—in the Brain as in the Automobile Engine!

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

The first thing is to know yourself and the engine at work within you.

Knowing yourself and understanding as well as you can how and why you work, the second thing is TO MAKE YOURSELF WORK, and thus make your life worth while.

Serious men feel like swimmers fighting a tide. They know that, as time goes, their powers decline, and they are anxious by wise use of their strength to prove themselves good swimmers.

We are fighting the tide of time. That tide runs on forever, it sweeps us all out to the boundless ocean of eternity, eventually, and our swimming hours are short. If we want to be among those that count, we can afford to waste neither strength nor time.

Time is our great asset, and as this is written, and as you read it, time sweeps past like a mill race.

One of Heine's poems says that every time the heart beats it deals us a death blow. We are bleeding to death, and time is the life blood that we lose with each tick of the clock.

"Know thyself." Write that line above the temple of your thought, as the Greeks wrote it above the entrance to the great temple on the hill.

Know at least as much as you CAN know of yourself—the most that we can know is little, for in this life we are finite forms, existing in the infinite. We are a part of eternity and forever associated with it, yet as little capable of understanding it as a common soldier of understanding the plans of Alexander marching that soldier from Macedonia to Babylon.

We cannot grasp the WHOLE of anything. We are like flies walking over the surface of a great painting. We can see only one tiny spot of the picture at a time and can never see it as a whole.

Nevertheless, we should be OBSERVANT flies on the canvas of eternity and gather as much knowledge as possible of that picture—trusting that the day will come when we shall fly farther from the canvas and, with clearer sight, view and understand complete the splendid plan and idea.

Today, observe the just comparison between YOU—who read this—and the automobile that rolls by you on the street.

This comparison will interest you and will suggest to you methods of improving your capacity.

The automobile, like yourself, is intended to do certain work.

The automobile engine is like your brain and muscles. In that automobile engine there are "cylinders," metallic containers in which gasoline mixed with air forms a gas—and the gas BY AN ELECTRIC SPARK is exploded.

Gasoline properly mixed with air explodes with tremendous force, and the force of that explosion drives the engine, turns the wheels, sends cars at high speed, makes mankind independent of distance, and builds up a new, great industry.

What the electric spark is to the motor engine THE SPARK OF WILL POWER is to your mental engine.

Remember that all the properly mixed gasoline in the world would not budge a single baby carriage, much less a heavy automobile, WITHOUT THAT ELECTRIC SPARK. And all the mental force, education and experience in your brain are as worthless as unexploded gasoline in a motor cylinder, unless that power of mind is transformed into intellectual activity and moving force by the explosive spark of will power.

You may have possibilities without end—they are useless unless the explosive spark of the will is there.

An automobile stops suddenly. The driver examines all its parts. The wheels are in good order. The transmission-carrying power from the engine to the axle is perfect. There is a good supply of gasoline in the tank. The tires are well inflated—all perfect, EXCEPT—there is something wrong with the battery. That has given out. A test shows that no spark flashes in the explosive gas. Without the spark the gas is inert, as useless for motive power as so much buttermilk.

What that electric, explosive spark is to the gas in the engine's cylinder, the spark of will is to the latent power hidden away in the cylinders, the "convulsions," of your brain.

Look after your mental "ignition"—the words motorists apply to their engine's supply of explosive fire. See that the mind's power does not remain dormant and idle for lack of the spark of WILL that transforms vague thought into instant useful action.

And remember that you CAN CONTROL YOUR MENTAL IGNITION. More fortunate than the mechanical automobile, you are not dependent on anything outside of yourself. You have the spark, you have the engine, you have the power, waiting for the spark of will to come and explode it.

In the front of your brain, just back of your forehead, there is a magneto of will power, infinitely more wonderful than any part of any man-made machine. That magneto of the mind CAN be made to work by whoever WILL. In that front brain, where will power and abstract thought are born, the sparks are developed that explode the forces resident in the back brain, which is the engine. The spark of will power explodes the forces of the working brain, and there the work is done, the orders and power are sent through your nerves, which are our "transmission" to the entire body. And the man with a steadily working magneto goes on, produces, tries, struggles, like a panting engine fighting against a steep hill, and eventually reaches the top.

And sometimes an engine will stop suddenly and balk—no spark, no WILL POWER. Study automobiles, see the marvelous development of the machines that eat up distance. Examine and understand the magneto for yourself and make up your mind to take as good care of that magneto behind your forehead as any chauffeur ever took of the spark-giving and speed-giving magneto in his engine.

Put your hand NOW on your forehead and realize that in there is the wonderful engine that CAN make you a success, and make up your mind that hereafter it shall be a conscientious chauffeur to your own brain, and give it a chance to win in life's big race.

The Soldiers' Bonus

Editor Boston American:

There is a plenty of organized opposition to the bonus that may defeat the best efforts of us who are working for it unless we get the support of the public in the newspapers. Congress is going to view every proposition put up to it this Winter in the light of votes for 1924, and if it knows how the ex-service men, and especially those who live here in the Middle West, feel about not getting their bonus, I'm sure the bonus bill would pass.

It's all nonsense that the bonus bill is political "pork," or a raid on the treasury of a cheap piece of American Legion politics. It is just an act of simple justice to the vast majority of boys who joined the colors and defended their country, at the risk of their lives, the loss of all the things war takes away even from the victors, and the sleepless anxieties of their loved ones. We don't want pay for this in money, but there are countless thousands of us who could give comfort to others with that bonus just now.

WORLD WAR VET.

Girl Needs Coat

Editor Helping Hand:

Would some kind reader give a coat to a fourteen-year-old girl as we are unable to get one. I was waiting from week to week but it seems impossible to get one, as it takes every cent to live on. Their are four girls and two boys. The ages of the girls are, 14, 12, 10 and 6; boys, 4 and 2. Anything you will send will be very much appreciated.

Orphan Girl In Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am an orphan girl fourteen years old. I have four brothers and sisters, and we are all badly in need of clothing. Father died two years ago, and mother died last August. I stay at my aunt's house. She is a widow and doesn't get very much money. Here are our sizes: My aunt wears size 36 and size 4½ in shoes; my sisters wear twelve, ten and 5½-year sizes, and my brothers wear sizes 12½, 7½, 6½ and 2½. I wear size 14.

Aged Man Needs Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

Could any of your kind readers help me out, as I am badly in need of a pair of pants and coat and something to keep me warm. I am seventy-nine years old and have no one to help me out. I go out on odd jobs cleaning carpets and cellars and make just about enough to pay my board. My sizes are 32 waist, 18 leg, shirt collar 15 and shoes 6 or over.

F. C.

Needs Warm Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

My husband is in poor health and works only half the time. As a result, he is very much in need of clothing, particularly warm underclothing. We have six children, the oldest nine years and the youngest three months, so you see it is pretty hard with so many mouths to feed. His size is 38 chest and 14½ collar. These things would be a real Christmas present to him.

ALL GOES FOR FOOD

All contributors to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund may be sure that every cent submitted goes to pay for food only. The Helping Hand editor urges his generous friends and their friends to send in contributions at once and make them as large as their ever-ready pocket books will stand. We must make a new record this year. See details on another page

Boys' and Girls' Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a large bundle of boys' woolen stockings sizes 7, 8 and 9. Also two sweaters for a boy or girl of six years and one for a boy of eight. There are so many in need it is hard to pick someone in need, so I leave that to you. What a wonderful idea this system is to help those in need.

MRS. K. R. L.

Many thanks. You have been sent the address of Mrs. E. B. M., who has a large family of children in need of clothing.

Hard to Get Along

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a little boy thirteen and one five, and I lost a little boy five months ago. What with all the hospital bills and the funeral expenses, and the fact that my husband has been out of work through illness for more than three months, it is pretty hard to get along. If I could get some clothing size fifteen years for the older boy and size 8 for the other boy and size 42 for myself I would be very grateful.

MRS. E. G.

THE STEAM ROLLER BREAKS DOWN ON CAPITOL HILL

By Herbert Kaufman

CONGRESS is in session, but not in action. With a presidential year impending, legislation must fret and fume until partisan advantage is served.

House organization is still stalled by a rambunctious minority. The battle is not to the strong, but to the strategically secure. As witness Leonidas and Horatius.

Of course, odds are in favor of Mr. Gillett. Lloyds, however, would enter bets on several dark horses for the speakership.

The row in the Ruhr is obscured by the wrangles in the Capitol.

For many a day to come American attention will be centred on three issues, which all factions admit are primarily important to stability—and election success: lower taxes, cheaper freight and some sort of a soldiers' bonus.

Democrats, Republicans and exotics confess that the questions are undodgeable. Each, however, insist that the opposition plan for skinning said cats is insupportable.

Between mutiny and enemy attacks "the old guard" may yet be compelled to surrender or die.

Archimedes Almost Did It

Meanwhile, a thousand new bills and resolutions are ready for introduction.

About half of them shan't be heard from after first reading.

Among other innovations, suggested at the convention in Pierre, are repudiation of the gold standard and the partial substitution of labor as the basis of monetary values.

Archimedes, who also used to think of easy little jobs like that, could have moved the world as he pleased, provided he had found something against which to rest his lever.

All that the Farm-Labor party needs to accomplish its purpose is approval by all the powers, several of which, incidentally, have forgotten the very look of gold.

The campaign now being launched against illiteracy proposes to teach ten million or our people how to read and write. The opening pages of the primer might wisely be devoted to the information that "the cheaper the money the dearer the goods." Germany has removed any lingering doubts on that point.

A Business Without Business Methods

But the lesson of ham at a trillion marks per pound and 5-cent francs mean nothing to the average farmer who clings to the superstition of inflation as doggedly as ever alchemist chased philosopher's stones.

There's nothing the matter with agriculture which can't be cured by thrift and common sense. The worst of rural ills are self-invoked. Food raising is largely a reckless trade because food producers won't keep balance sheets and watch budgets. They expect to do business without business methods. Thousands of wheat ranches haven't a truck garden, a pig pen or a chicken yard on the property.

Wherever mortgages are thickest, silos and gasoline engines are scarcest. The energy wasted on empirical makeshifts for intelligence and management could double our crop yields and the earnings therefrom.

McAdoo Stands by His Guns

A fundamental scheme of society makes no provision for men who neglect to use their wits. Sound government opposes the encouragement of stupidity. Emergency aid may be required in such economic crises as followed the unexpected conclusion of the World War.

Washington undoubtedly stimulated an undue expansion of grain territory and should, in simple justice, lend a helping hand to the victims of its misjudgment. But in the long run, this exception does not invalidate the wise principle that no group of citizens shall be subsidized at common expense.

Prevalent opinion that trainmen were so favored is vehemently denied by ex-Secretary McAdoo, who asserts that the wages granted by his administration were merely proportionate to increased living costs.

The war would have lasted at least another year and cost another twenty additional billions except for the skill and enthusiasm of railroad employes upon whose shoulders rested the responsibility of maintaining traffic at super pitch.

Mr. McAdoo doesn't believe that it is necessary to take the roads from private control. National ownership, to his mind, would only be warranted by a manifest inclination to disregard public welfare, refusal to abate extravagance and neglect to keep rates in conformity with legitimate operating expense.

Pinchot Pickles a Rod for the Coal Gang

Governor Pinchot plainly doesn't think that anthracite operators are ready to accept a similar program. The further he delves into the coal problem, the stronger his conviction that Uncle Sam must regulate the mining and sale of hard fuel.

With thirty thickly populated States at the mercy of cunning, greedy, defiant profiteers, health and prosperity demand drastic protection of consumers' rights. They asked for it.

The American Railway Express also comes a cropper. The Interstate Commerce Commission examines the cost chart and fails to find any reason for projected higher rates.

The commission hasn't yet told Henry Ford where he gets off, but will announce the exact spot shortly.

Pending that decision, the richest candidate for the presidency drops into the White House and signifies willingness to resume dickers on Muscle Shoals, which is more in his line than running a democracy in total contempt of historical traffic signals.

STELLA DALLAS By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. These two are now at a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY

Author of "Bobbie, General Manager," "The Fifth Wheel," "The Star in the Window," Etc.

AS Stella preceded him out of the restaurant she was as pleased with the present-moment excitement, the present-moment attentions, as a young girl of sixteen on the way to her first matinee with an admiring suitor. Her pleasure was almost as innocent, too.

Alfred Munn selected for the afternoon's entertainment a popular musical farce. Stella adored a musical farce with all the bold gay costumes. The seats he bought were aisle seats—the best in the house, three rows from the front.

As Stella settled herself for the two hours and a half of pleasure in store for her, she was keenly conscious of her nearness to the stage, to the orchestra. How good it did seem to be right down in the midst of things again! When the curtain rolled up on the first act amidst a loud fanfare of trumpets, which Stella could feel tingle inside her, she was filled with gratitude to Alfred Munn.

Why, she calculated, already his kindness to her had cost him something like $15—$20 possibly. How much were cocktails and wines now, anyhow, and Porterhouse steaks? She mustn't be disappointing to him. She mustn't edge away from Alfred Munn's overlapping arm and shoulder. She must remember her age. Nineteen can afford to be as stand-offish as it chooses, but not thirty-nine. Stanley, in one way it was gratifying to Stella that Alfred Munn wanted to sit so close.

She had been afraid of late that there was nothing but tiny wrinkles and double chins left of her. But there was—there was! Alfred Munn knew women. Alfred Munn made Stella feel that there was lots else left.

She talked and laughed, eyes shining, and cheeks hot and flushed beneath the powder. Occasionally Laurel's serious face, crowned with the unfamiliar toque with the berries on one side, interrupted, shoved itself between her and the stage, between her and Alfred Munn.

The toque made her look frightfully like a young lady. She was growing up. No doubt about that. Stella hadn't seen her cry since—She couldn't remember since when. Funny kid. Just got silent and horribly quiet instead of letting the tears of a year or two ago well up in her eyes and spill over. Of late she, Stella, was the one who did the crying for the two of them. But she mustn't get teary, here, now, for heaven's sake!

Laurel would be about at New London now, Stella calculated, New Haven, Bridgeport later, New York pretty soon, walking up the long gangplanklike walk, with the bits of rocks in it, sparkling like tiny stars beneath the white artificial light; looking for Stephen; seeing him; greeting him; sitting in a taxicab beside him.

Stella never stayed long after Laurel left

They always took a taxicab.

Queer, thought Stella, how the very sight of her present escort used to irritate Stephen. It would be interesting to Alfred Munn, she guessed, and flattering to him, too, if he had a notion how much he used to be discussed between Stephen and herself.

Stephen was always making such queer mistakes about her little affairs, picking out somebody she really didn't care a straw about, like Alfred Munn, for instance, to get stuffy over, and remaining undisturbed by the attentions from men who really interested her. Alfred Munn, indeed! A riding-teacher! That was what he had been, in Milhampton seven years ago. The smartest women in town took lessons of him. So did Stella. And the smartest women in town were keen about him, or pretending to be.

Naturally they weren't any of them seriously keen about Alfred Munn. The other women's husbands understood. But Stephen wouldn't. It was ridiculous, absurd. Stella told Stephen so dozens and dozens of times. But he would persist in making a mountain out of a molehill.

That was how Mrs. Holland described Stephen's attitude. There was he woman in Milhampton now the fashion than Mrs. Holland at that time. Stella had been immensely pleased by her friendship. Every word she uttered was to Stella like the wisdom of an oracle.

"Husbands need a lot of training, my dear," she had told Stella after a burst of confidences from Stella one afternoon. "Don't let yourself become a doormat. Husbands don't respect doormats, in the long run. Teach him that you can look at another man without wanting to elope with him. And get him used to the idea that you aren't blind to every other masculine creature in the world but himself. Such an attitude keeps them lovers, makes them alert, attentive, my dear."

But it didn't seem to keep Stephen a lover. It didn't make Stephen alert and attentive. It worked just the other way with him.

What Is the Effect Upon the Two, and Especially Upon Their Strange and Beautiful Child Laurel?

These reflections did not possess Stella in the theatre. It was later, alone on the train, returning to her beach hotel that she glanced into her past. She didn't allow herself to do so frequently. It didn't make her any happier. Things had been so rosy, so promising ten years ago—so far beyond her most extravagant girlhood dreams. And now—now!

Resolutely she turned her thoughts to other things. She was to meet Alfred Munn again the following Saturday for lunch and another matinee. What should she wear? The sudden necessity of a new early-fall hat gave her a little thrill of delight.

Stella Enjoyed Shopping

There was nothing in the world Stella enjoyed more than a morning spent in Boston at the expensive upstairs shops, pricing and trying on hats, followed by an afternoon in the downtown department stores buying backrash, wire, velvet, feathers, ornaments, flowers, and what-not, and the long delicious day afterwards shut up in her room moulding with her clever fingers a copy of some little gem that a Broadway artist in Paris had conceived.

When Stella said good-bye to Laurel, her plan to spend two hours in the shops had not been an exciting prospect to her. It was stupid to shop if you had nothing you had to buy. The chance meeting with Alfred Munn provided Stella with the necessary incentive to start the machinery of her creative genius going. She would have to have a new dress, too. Perhaps she could pick up some Summer silk thing marked down, and pep it up with some black velvet trimming, at present on an old chiffon evening gown of hers she scarcely ever wore. Braid trimming was being worn again this Fall. Possibly it would be a good idea to get herself her own wardrobe trunk immediately, even if it was early in the season. Men liked varied, and looked as if Alfred Munn doesn't to see her rather often during Laurel's absence.

When he had put her aboard her train, he had told her that if she didn't object to leaving the steamer for the city frequently he was going to keep her from getting lonely, if she'd let him, while the kid was away.

She wished he wouldn't call Laurel "the kid" and the "offspring." She wished his linen collar hadn't been grimy round the top edge. She wished he hadn't chanced to omit shaving that morning.

A man who shaved every morning without reference to the day's program, and put on a clean collar without reference to the old one, was one of Stella's tests of a gentleman. Alfred Munn never was guilty of any such offenses when he was the rage in Milhampton. Yes, yes, Stephen was right. Second-rate—that was the term he used to apply to Alfred Munn. Well, she didn't care. It didn't rob orchestra seats at the most popular shows in town of their attraction for Stella, or luncheon-tables in the most popular restaurant in town of their luxury and joy.

Alfred Munn was going to take her for lunch next Saturday to the newest and most expensive hotel in the city.

Stella spent that evening packing her trunks (there remained two old-fashioned bump-backed affairs), and again it was early morning before she lay down in the battered white iron bed to go to sleep.

Ocean on One Side

Stella never stayed on at the expensive Summer resorts after Laurel went. Fifteen miles nearer Boston, along a sandy beach, there was a stretch of boardwalk, with the ocean on one side, and on the other, a row of cheap amusement places. Behind that row of amusement places there was a nest of lodging houses.

By occupying a room in one of these houses, and taking her meals outside, Stella could save enough money over what it cost her to live at the expensive Summer hotel to buy several Formaste for Laurel and a wrist-watch, and a fur coat, too, if Stephen still persisted in books.

Housewife's Idea Box

To Keep the Fluff From Coming Through the Pillow Slip

It is very annoying to have the soft feathers and down come through the pillow slips. You can prevent this. Before putting on the first covering into the muslin on the wrong side with a hot iron well rubbed with beeswax. The wax will act as a varnish on the muslin and prevent the fluff from coming through.

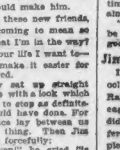
WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

"JIM, I want to ask you if I'm a handicap to you? I mean, do you feel there's anything in that old saying about 'marry in haste and repent at leisure?'"



Ann Lisle

I tried again. Holding back my longing to cry out my love for him, I urged myself to the point of offering Jim his freedom if that was the supreme gift I could make him.

"I mean, are these new friends, any of them, coming to mean so much to you that I'm in the way? If I handicap your life I want to get out of it—make it easier for you," I floundered.

Jim suddenly sat up straight and stared at me with a look which commanded me to stop as definitely as words could have done. For a moment silence lay between us like a tangible thing. Then Jim smashed into it forcefully:

"Anne Harrison!" he cried "is there some one else you care more for than you do for me?"

"Jim! I protested.

Wants the Truth

"Is there some one who cares for you?" he went on. "I don't believe in heroics and monkey-shines. If you're tired of me, say so. But don't make an elaborate gesture of offering me my freedom because you love me so. It isn't done. Now, come, tell me—what have you up your sleeves?"

"It isn't that," I protested, with all the force and fire taken out of my attempted sacrifice of Jim's turning the tables. "You know there isn't anyone—"

"Do I?" demanded Jim. "How do I know that? You seem darn certain there is someone else for me. Well, why shouldn't I get up in the air over your interest in Ralph—over your driving to my bedside with hint! Seems to me there's just as much reason for hysterics in your actions as in mine. You've told me over and over that Ralph is interested in you. How do I know you're not'—

"Jim, you've forced Ralph on me" I cried. "You've insisted on our friendship. And sometimes I've thought it was so you could be free to make your friendships without worrying me."

"Be that's what you've thought," said Jim curtly.

A ring at the doorbell cut into his words. Realizing that it was late and the maids might have gone to bed, I went to the door. And there on the threshold stood Ralph Lacy.

Ralph Lacy was actually radiant as he came into the hall of my apartment. He didn't appear to notice my restrained manner. But I, conscious of the fact that Jim and I had been near quarreling about Ralph and, for once, I was not glad to see this good friend.

"Hello, Anne!" he cried boyishly. "I'm mighty glad to find you in, for I've good news"—

"And I also have good news," I interrupted. "Jim got back in time for dinner and he's feeling almost himself."

"Great!" Ralph declared. "I'll be tickled to pieces to see the good old scout. Lead me to him!"

Jim Scowls

I wondered uneasily how much cold water Jim would throw on Ralph's elation, and though I was eager to know the cause of it, I didn't dare stop for a private conference lest it cause one of the explosions of temper of which Jim is capable and of which I'd be ashamed to have Ralph made aware. So I led the way to the living room.

As Ralph followed me past the doorway, Jim looked up with something between a scowl and a sneer. Ralph either didn't see it or chose to ignore it as an invalid's privilege. He marched over to Jim with his hand outheld.

"Howdy, old man. It's great to find you here and looking so fit!" he cried. "Are you feeling as well as you look?"

"Hello, Lacy," replied Jim coldly. "We'll not go into how I'm feeling. What brings you here—in my supposed absence?"

His tone was an insult. But Ralph rose above it and answered with grave pleasantness.

YOUR BEAUTY

A SERIES OF PRACTICAL VALUE

By Maria Jeritza.

Famous Prima Donna of Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

IN these days of athletic games and loose, comfortable clothes a strong straight back is taken as a matter of course. Many a woman of today has rarely if ever experienced a backache.

It is hard to believe that in the Victorian era of inactive women and tight lacing, backaches and weak, drooping backs were the rule rather than the exception among women and fainting fits were really fashionable.

The improved health and athletic activity of the present generation have brought about this increased beauty of figure. For after all what is beauty but the fine perfection of health, mental and physical?

To be strong and well is in itself such a joy that it gives a woman beyond charm. But in addition health carries with it the elements of beauty. A straight symmetrical figure, a clear skin, rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, red lips, smooth, shining hair, easy unconscious grace of movement and posture—all these attributes of beauty are but the bloom of exquisite health. So the woman who wishes to possess the gift of beauty must cultivate and preserve her health.

And it is not an arduous undertaking—this quest of beauty through good health. Every bit of it, from clear, constructive thinking to outdoor games and exercise, plentiful baths and sensible, simple living, is not only interesting—it is keenly absorbing and delightful.

And health, itself, as well as beauty depends on harmonious thinking. For without harmonious, happy thinking, all the dieting in the world, all the exercise and sleep, will be a waste of time as far as charm and beauty and the perfection of health are concerned.

Happiness and good health will give you a merry step that will straighten your back and keep it strong. But in addition exercises will prove a pleasure, because they are a natural outlet for your energy and will aid in making your back supple, straight and graceful.

Try this exercise each morning before you take your morning bath. After a few weeks, substitute for it, if you wish, others I shall suggest from time to time, designed to meet your special needs.

Stand erect with your weight over the balls of your feet. Now throw both arms back and down vigorously without bending your elbows or your back. As you do so, bring your right knee up quickly, energetically as far as it will go. Return to position. Alternate by throwing your arms back and bringing up your left knee as far as it will go. Continue to alternate, repeating the exercise from ten to twelve times.

This movement will exercise your legs and back and will also bring your head up into correct and graceful position.

WHAT THE STARS SAY

Lucky Day for Speculation

THIS day's sidereal operations seem to make for turmoil and excitement. Much harm may be done by an unruly act of stubborn coupse of conduct, and quarrels and litigation may prove disastrous. There is a linear transit favoring new projects and large corporations. It is a lucky day for speculation.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of strenuous situations which it may take much wisdom to turn to account. Quarrelsome conditi will serve no good purpose.

A child born on this day will be quick and clever and may be impetuous.

Tomorrow will be unlucky for travel or great changes.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"To succeed in the world, one should appear like a fool, but be wise."

Is one of the shrewd observations of Montesquieu in his "Persian Diversus."

"He who owns the soil, owns up to the sky."

"This story will not go down."

This oft repeated comment on an incredible or patently false tale, was used by Fielding in "Tumble Down Dick."

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

A SEATTLE man is suing his wife for divorce because the only time she lets him eat in the dining room is when they have company.

HE says they were married three years before he knew their house had any other room but a kitchen.

HE also claims that she gave him two black eyes once for using a guest towel.

SHE said he should have washed his face and hands at the office before he came home.

HE complains that his wife has only had their silverware out twice. Once when they had friends for supper and another time when she wanted to hock it.

AS far as he was concerned he might just as well have had ash knives and forks engraved with their neighbor's initials on them.

THE only thing he ever used that had his monogram on it was the dishpan.

THEY were quite wealthy and had two machines. A Rolls Royce and a vacuum cleaner.

IT embarrassed him to have to get a manicure every time he wanted to play with the dog.

ONE day he told the dog to "shut up" and his wife had the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals get after him.

SHE didn't care how much her husband suffered, but she didn't want the dog's feelings hurt.

HE didn't see the dog very often, however, because she wouldn't let her husband in the parlor and wouldn't allow the Pomeranian in the kitchen.

HE told her to choose between him and the dog. She cried and said she'd never be able to get another Pomeranian like that one.

DO NOT MAKE YOUR HOME SO FINE YOU WILL BE EMBARRASSED BY DEBT.

Are you one of those persons afraid to live in a neighborhood you can afford, because you are afraid what some of your acquaintances might think?

You can pay your debts if you buy cheaper furnishings and live in a modestly small home, but these small quarters might be scorned by some of your friends of a day.

If you have the best you can afford, and those who call on you are not satisfied with your surroundings, it is not worth making yourself unhappy about what they think.

Isn't your peace of mind something?

Your home should mean a place of peace and comfort to you and your family.

Make it as fine as your finances will permit, but do not bring unhappiness into it just to please those who visit you occasionally.
